 Bombs are blamed on far Right •Jews fear they may be next target

Police say racists will strike again

BY STEWART TENDLER, RICHARD FORD AND JOANNA BALE

POLICE fear the neo-Nazi racists who planted nail bombs in Brixton and Brick Lane in London will strike again in other cities, and possibly against Jewish targets.

As Scotland Yard drafted extra detectives into the anti-terrorist branch yesterday and stepped up the hunt for the bombers, Jack Straw, the Home Secretary, said there was a constant danger until the "extremely evil, unpleasant" criminals and terrorists were caught.

The hunt for the bombers is Scotland Yard's top priority. Senior officers are well aware that their success will be closely monitored by ethnic communities in the wake of the Stephen Lawrence inquiry. Sir Paul Condon, Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, yesterday condemned the attack in Brick Lane on Saturday evening as "an appalling outrage" and an attack on "innocent people in innocent communities". The police now had no doubt that the two attacks were racist. Sir Paul said: "We feared the Brixton bomb would be repeated and, tragi-cally, it has been. We have had very serious fears there will be a continuing series of vicious attacks and we cannot rule out these attacks might be taken outside London."

As Sir Paul spoke, Yard officers were briefing other forces. A national meeting of chief constables on Wednesday will be told the latest developments in the investigations. Outside London, there are potential targets in Slough, Luton. Birmingham. Leicester. Manchester, Bradford, Bristol, Nottingham, Leeds, the Lancashire mill towns and Glasgow. The Yard has also had talks in the last week with senior officials of the Jewish community. Michael Whine, from the British Board of Jewish Deputies, said yesterday that it was logical to think that Jews could be the next target. In Saturday evening's atON OTHER PAGES

It was found by a white man in his fifties in Hanbury Street, which is lined with shops and restaurants. He picked up the bag at about 17.37, walked round to Brick Lane and put it in the boot of his car. He looked at the contents and then closed the boot. According to police, he then became worried at what he might have found. He crossed the road to a small, part-time

He decided not to move the car and walked to a former police station in Leman Street, which is now used as offices.

He tried to telephone police but as he did so, at 17.57, the bomb exploded. Six-inch nails were hurled 40 yards down the street, smashing shop windows. Six Asian people were injured slightly. An anti-terrorist officer said yestrerday that putting the bomb in the car had not reduced the power of the blast. The greater energy built up probably threw the nails further down the street.

The bombing came at the end of a week in which a number of ethnic community groups received warnings, purporting to come from extremist groups, threatening that Brick Lane and other areas were to be attacked. Police patrols were increased, but Sir Paul said the network of streets in Spitalfields was difficult to monitor.

Two hours after the blast a caller claimed that Combat 18. the most violent of the rightwing groups, had planted the bomb. The call was made in a terse 999 call from a telephone box in New Malden, southwest London.

Police say there has been an increase in threats from extremist groups since the report on the Stephen Lawrence case in February. The last week has also seen anniversaries of Hitler's birthday. St George's Day and the attack on

The Southall Monitoring Project, in West London, said yesterday that it had received a handwritten letter from Combat 18 two days after the Brixton bomb, saying that there would be other attacks. The letter, which had a Hampshire postmark, gave warning of further attacks and named Southall, Slough, Tower Hamlets and Tottenham in London, Bradford and Dublin. The areas all have high concentrations of Indians. Pakistanis, Bangladeshis and black people. The letter suggested Dublin would be attacked because the group hated Roman Catholics.

Dashing Clinton fumbles America's nuclear football

A NEW and wholly unexpected threat to world security cropped up briefly during the weekend's Nato summit when President Clinton dashed off from a meeting and forgot to take with him the "nuclear football", a briefcase containing secret electronic launch codes for US nuclear missiles. The football, a communications link with the Pentagon authorising the use of nuclear weapons, is carried by (and chained to a military aide who is supposed to remain just feet from the President whenever he leaves the White House. But on Saturday Mr Clinton ended his International Trade Centre meeting and

ing behind the most dangerous handbag in the world. The aide marched the halfmile to the White House, thankfully without being mugged, and reunited the President with his portable "button". "We're safe," Joe Lockhart, the White House spokesman, said. He added that the meeting had ended 45 minutes ahead of schedule, and "rather than wait for everyone to gather, he just took off".

The black attache case has been known as the "football" and passed with care from one president to the next since Eisenhower's day. The device. containing a telephone, two pull-up antennae and codes to identify the caller, would give the President a range of options in responding to a nuclear alert. The President also carries a card containing identification codes to launch a nuclear strike. Mr Clinton is not the first ball. In 1975 Gerald Ford arrived at an economic summit in Paris and discovered, with horror, that it had been left in a luggage compartment on Air Force One. "It was one of those things: Didn't you bring the football? No. I thought you had the football," Ron Nessen. the embarrassed White House press secretary, explained. Jimmy Carter left the code-card in his suit when it was sent to the dry-cleaners, and Ronald Reagan was separated from it when shot by John Hinkley in 1981. Later it was discovered that the FBI had seized it as evidence. Mr Clinton's Russian counterpart is accompanied by an aide carrying a "cheger". although there are rumours that it may be simply symbolic. According to a 1996 CIA report. Mr Yelisin's first defence minister was asked whether he and the President could "push the button" for a nuclear attack. "Yes," came the answer. "But nothing would happen."

Bewildered refugees find their haven in Britain

By PAUL WILKINSON AT LEEDS BRADFORD AIRPORT

A SMALL boy stepped hesti-tantly off a set of aircraft steps yesterday to become the first Kosovan from the Balkan refugee camps to arrive on British soil.

The unfamiliar airport on the edge of Leeds and the ranks of waiting pressmen were all a little too much for Alben Maksuti, 4, and he needed a guiding hand from a member of the ground staff to steer him towards an airport bus and a future which nobody can yet predict.

Behind him came his mother, followed by a straggling column of bewildered refugees from the Macedonian camp at Stenkovic.

One was Avni Gosalci, 27. who fled with his wife Anita. 25, and their baby daughter Dielleza, two months old. He was relieved to be in Britain but concerned for the family he had left behind. "We are very grateful for everything this country has done," he said. Even in the camps, the British were sensitive and helpful."

The chemistry student from Pristing told how his family was given two minutes to leave their home by Serb police threatening them with knives, and said that he was allowed to escape only because of his daughter.

"I held the baby in my arms. Without the baby it would have been very difficult if not impossible to be allowed to cross the border. Because we had a baby we were lucky. Again we are very grateful to the baby for saving our lives." Of the 161 on the three-hour flight from Skopje, 70 were children, eight of them aged under two. One, a schoolboy suffering from multiple sclerosis, was taken from the aircraft in his wheelchair aboard a specially adapted hoist. Most of the rest were women. Such was the confused state of events that officials in Leeds had no exact picture of who was aboard the Tupolev 154 jet

The refugees' long day began when they boarded buses at the giant Brazde and Stenkovic camps after a lastminute medical check from doctors wearing masks. They climbed aboard four vehicles amid smiles, waves and tears and were driven to the airport. arriving at 10am and loading bags, suitcases and bin liners onto waiting trolleys.

The mood on board the buses was decidedly mixed, some families delighted to be leaving with everyone on board, others distraught at leaving behind sisters, cousins and friends. One boy, Visar, clutched a toy rabbit named Lepurosh, the Albanian for Bunny, as he trotted happily into the airport.

By contrast Fexherije Shala, 31, and her two sisters-in-law. Tebare and Behare, were reduced to tears as they were forced to leave behind Fexherije's sister Adlije. Unlike them. her name had not made it onto the reserve list.

Not that Menzies Campbell lords it. in the way that an educated Scot of a certain class can, the Liberal Democrat MP for North East Fife succeeds effortlessly in being of the people, for the people and above the people, all at the same time. And in prosperous Fife, the combination of looking like a Tory and not being one is irresistible. It would be inappropriate for Ming (as Scots pronounce the abbreviated Menzies) to act as though he were anybody special; but everyone around him will. The yellow banner they've draped across the shopfront of his HQ in Cupar says "Menzies Campbell QC, CBE ROM".

His party's Leader is shortly to retire, and there have been discreet murmurs that, if pressed — if friends are determined, his name should go forward - well . . . Ming would not wish to shirk. But that's for another day. Today the campaign is for the local LibDem candidate in the Scottish Parliamentary elec-

The splendid Elspeth ("Mrs Campbell" has never sounded right) upbraids The Times: "You are wicked to seek us out like this." Her husband explains the pur-pose of a Liberal Democrat walkabout: "Little talking. Pace. Don't tarry. We want people to say, 'Lord - the ruddy street's full of Liberal Democrats'. Hague unruffled by split with Old Guard

BY PHILIP WEBSTER POLITICAL EDITOR

WILLIAM HAGUE delivered a "like it. or lump it" message to his Tory critics last night as he prepared to take the break with his party's Thatcherite past a stage further.

Mr Hague declared that if colleagues' feathers had been ruffled over his rejection of health and education privatisation, they would have to "get unruffled because that is the way I am going to carry on".

Having authorised Francis Maude, the Shadow Chancellor, to make plain today that the Tories would match in government the massive Labour increases in spending on health and education, the Tory leader was going out of his way to stress that he would not be deflected by the fierce reaction in the Tory press and among Thaicherite members of the Shadow Cabinet against his tactics.

That was underlined again
Michael yesterday when Michael Howard, who led the internal criticism last week of the speech by Peter Lilley ruling out big private sector solutions for health and education. made his own irritation publicly obvious. Howard did not demur but added to Sir David Frost: "Peter Lilley made a speech. If you want Peter to talk about his speech I am sure he would be delighted to come on to your programme."

Another member of the Shadow Cabinet denounced the Lilley-Hague strategy as crazy - how can we ever promise to cut taxes again?" Woody and Soon-Yi show off their mystery child

Neurotic film star's lack of parenting skills put to test, writes James Bone

WOODY Allen and his young bride, Soon-Yi Previn, played the proud parents at the weekend when they paraded their new baby girl up New York's Sashionable Madison Avenue in a pram.

The controversial couple, who have a 35-year age difference, said they had named the child Bechet Dumaine Allen - thought to be a tribute to Sidney Bechet, the late, great iazz clarinetist, and Jean Doumanian, the director's longtime confidant and producer.

Mr Allen, 63, refused to reveal how old the infant was beyond saying she was "a few months". The child appeared to have Asian features, like her Korean-born mother, but Soon-Yi Previn. 28, has not looked pregnant in recent public appearances and there was speculation that the baby, like her mother, was adopted.

The scandal broke back in 1992 when Mr Allen's longtime companion, Mia Farrow, found oude photographs of Soon-Yi, then a 21-year-old college student, on the mantelpiece of his flat on Fifth Avenue. Io her autobiography, What Folls Away, the actress recalls how she confronted Mr Allen, screaming: "You're meant to do the right thing. You're not supposed to for the

One of seven children of the Australian film director John Farrow and the Irish actress Maureen O'Sullivan, Ms Farrow has herself been described by Mr Allen as a "thrill mom". She now has a total of ten adopted children and four biological offspring.

During their 13-year relationship, Ms Farrow and Mr Allen adopted a son, Moses, and a daughter, Dylan, and had a natural son named Satchel,

Although he has known Soon-Yi since she was eight, Mr Allen insists that he never played the father-figure to his future bride because he and Ms Farrow never married and always lived apart on opposite sides of Central Park.

The discovery of the affair so shocked Ms Farrow that she launched a bitter hattle for custody of Dylan, Moses and Satchel, and publicly accused Mr Allen of molesting their adopted daughter, then aged seven. Although the director was never prosecuted for child abuse, he was barred from seeing his children without a monitor in the room and is now reportedly estranged from all three.

Mr Allen and Soon-Yi eloped to Venice, where they were married in a ceremony in the town hall. In what was seen as an effort to restore his reputation, Mr Allen, who plays clarinet when he is not Shadows and Fog and a pair of gold-and-red sofas used in writing, directing or acting in his films, allowed Barbara Crimes and Misdemeanours Kopple, the Oscar-winning and Bullets Over Broadway.

The White Wolves, who have demanded that all Jews and non-whites leave Britain by the end of the year, are one of four far-Right organisations that have claimed responsibility for the Brixton attack.

The group favours the philosophy of "leaderless resistance" - forming small cells of two or three members to carry out random attacks, according 10 Gerry Gable, the publisher of the anti-Fascist magazine Searchlight. The group's name, a popular term among fascists, may be inspired by the "Werewolf" Nazi resistance planned by Hitler for occupied Germany. The White Wolves are the least well known of about a dozen British far-right organisations. The first, the National Front, was established in 1967. Its membership peaked at about 17,500 in the early seven-ties, but by in 1982 it was in near-terminal decline.

The British National Party was formed out of a split, with roughly 600 members. The BNP did have democratic political success when a member, Derek Beackon, served as a Tower Hamlets councillor in the early 1990s, This week a "Young BNP" Website came under investigation by the police for its racist message.

The decision to put 100 men and women on the streets of Southall was made yesterday at a hastily organised meeting of the Southall Monitoring Project and representatives of local temples and mosques.

The Jews have trained volunteers in a community security service who provide protection at synagogues and hotels during all Jewish celebrations and functions. The men patrol the pavement directly outside synagogues, search people before they enter the building and check on parked cars.

Europe fears far-Right campaign

FROM ROGER BOYES

GERMAN police investigating neo-Nazi activity have been put on alert af-ter the two apparently racially motivated bomb attacks in London.

There are long-standing contacts be-tween Combat 18 and far-Right groups in Germany," said a senior officer, expressing fears that attacks could be conducted across Europe. The German equivalent of Combat 18 is the Viking. Youth movement. Police forces in cities with a high density of foreigners — especially Berlin, with its large Turkish and Kurdish populations — are stepping up their intelligence work. The main fear seems to be the popular unwillinguess to take in a new wave of refugees from the Balkans. Some 10.000 Kosovans have already been accepted by the Germans and memories are still fresh as to how the flood of Bosnian refugees - more than 300,000 of them - created a groundswell of support for the far right.

Co-ordination between German, Austrian, Italian and British racist groups is carried out viz the Internet. and although there was no major ef-fort to mark Hitler's birthday on April 20, the various groups seem to be planning an international celebration on the anniversary of the death of Rudolf Hess. Hitler's deputy, in August.

Europe's most powerful and popu-lar extreme right-wing movements are French, but there is no recent evidence of links to terrorist activities. Jean-Marie Le Pen, the leader of the National Front, has built up links with the farright across Europe and has been seen with former SS members in Germany. There are no reports of public meetings with British extremists, but French police say it is highly likely that private contacts have been established.

WITNESSES to the Brick Lane bomb explosion described how the bustling street erupted into chaos as dozens of screaming people were showered with shards of glass and metal.

Some were on their way to a service at the London Jamme Masjid mosque, others were the first evening diners arriving at Indian restaurants and many were shoppers heading home from the market.

Emdad Talukder, 44, was

Now the Yard is so concerned at the threat from neonazi terrorists that Sir Paul Condon, the Metropolitan Police Commissioner, called the group from their weekend breaks into session yesterday.

group from their weekend breaks into session yesterday. They include officers from MIS, the City of London force and British Transport Police who were brought together to analyse the threat and make decisions about protecting the capital and eatching the bomber. Membership includes the heads of the Special Branch and the Anti-Terrorist Branch, senior crime commanders and assistant commissioners.

After the bomb in Brixton, the Yard had increased foot patrols across London in areas with large ethnic-minority communities, including the Brick Lane area, in the East End. Officers were moved from patrols in Central London and yesterday the group agreed that the police presence would be raised again in the streets of about a dozen areas in London with high concentrations of people from ethnic minorities.

The Yard is also urging all businesses, shops and councils in London to make sure private closed-circuit television systems are working.

But the key question before the group meeting yesterday at the Yard was how to catch the bomber or bombers. The groups on the Far Special Branch in London has a small tram watching the extreme Right. This is likely to be enlarged and the Yard will probably create an intelligence cell to sift all the information about the two bombs.

An expert in psychological

An expert in psychological profiles has been called in he will work with analysts to get a picture of possible suspects. One question they will consider is why the bombs began when they did: none of the telephoned claims have given a reason such as the publication of the Stephen Lawrence report or anniversaries such as Hitler's hirthday.

Police are also reviewing files on 400 to 500 extremists, looking for any with a history of violence and the technical capability to make the bombs. They believe there are only about 30 hardcore activists within Combat 18 but on the fringes there are others about whom little is known.

Interpol has been asked to contact other European forces for intelligence; MI5 has links to intelligence services on the Continent. The Yard is aware of links between neo-Nazis here and in Denmark, Germany, Sweden and America.

He said earlier this year: "I am the net-curtain comedy killer, the man who took out a contract on suburban sofas and knitted pullovers and will do for some of the dreary 1950s scenarios that have infected too many comedies."

Despite its often black humour, One Foot in the Grave is essentially a middle class comedy set in typical suburbia and centres on disputes with friends and neighbours.

However, Mr Jackson said that the new arrivals, which will start being broadcast from the autumn, would break new ground in comedy.

SATURDAY night entertainment on BBCI, for decades the mainstay of safe, family viewing, is to undergo a radical overhaul to attract the younger, cooler viewer.

Executives have decided to virtually rip up the schedule and start again from scratch after scrapping Noel's House Party, which they admit had begun to look tired.

They were told to submit ideas for Noel's House Party and TFI Friday. Chris Evans's show on Channel 4. Of the hundreds who applied, five have been interviewed and begin work on new programme ormats in the next four weeks.

BBC executives have been encouraged by the success of Vic Reeves and Bob Mortimer's new game show, Families At War, which is a radical departure from traditional family show formats but has still been hugely successful, However, the veteran family programme The Generation Game has been recommissioned and the National Lottery Show will remain in its current slot. At the Montreux Television Festival yesterday Mr Young said: 'There is a crisis in light entertainment TV because of a lack of ideas. The same formats and the reliance on the same shows has been go-

BRITAIN is expected to increase its military commitment to the Kosovo operation with a third 2.000-man armoured battle group, another squadron of eight Harrier GR7s and an extra frigate.

Following the decision by Nato leaders at the 50th anniversary summit in Washington to put even more effort into defeating President Milosevic by bombing alone - leaving the ground troops option in the hands of the contingency planners — General Wesley Clark, the Supreme Allied Commander, has asked for 400 more aircraft, bringing the total to about 1,400 planes.

Extra paratroopers reinforce Apache base

A SECOND wave of seven Apache attack helicopters arrived in Albania yesterday, and an additional 2,000 paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division were ordered to the same air base at Rinas, 20 miles from the capital, Tirana. Their arrival will briog the total oumber of combat troops there to nearly 6,000.

A first contingent of helicopters half the initial deployment of 24 arrived last Wedoesday.

The airport, where sheep once grazed on the runway because there were so few flights, is now convered in army tents, radar dishes, armoured personnel carriers and military aircraft. Behind us. Apaches clattered into the air, making practice runs over the nearby mountains to get used to the Balkans terrain.

Captain Mark Arden, 29, from the US Army's 11th Attack Helicopter Regiment, oormally based in Germany, revealed that there were women pilots in the Apache force at

Tirana. "But we had women pilots in the Gulf War, too," he added. According to one theory gaining ground here, the role of the Apaches will be to clear a corridor some 12-15 miles inside Kosovo from which the Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA) would operate under Nato proteotion. This "pocket" could then be cleared of mines to allow the symbolic return of some refugees. US officials deny that the mounting Nato force at Tirana is the nucleus of a land invasioo force. "The support-ing forces are here to back up the Apaches," said Major Dan Battio, the US army spokesman. although it was intended to operate a blockade, there were also plans to bomb the roads running through the mountains from Bar to ensure that those supplies that managed to get through would be prevented from reaching Serbia.

This would reverse Nato's pledge to avoid bombing infrastructure targets in Montenegro because of the need to support President Djukanovic in his stand against Mr Milosevic. The Montenegrin leader has been assured by Nato that he will still be able to receive his country's normal oil shipments. In return, Mr Djukanovic has agreed to allow Nato warships to control all tanker movements into Bar. The bombing of roads in Montenegro could, however, strain Nato's relationship with Mr

Djukanovic, Nato already has sufficient

warships in the Adriatic to implement a blockade, once the legal arguments have been resolved. The United States has four cruisers and five destroyers, as well as the aircraft carrier. Theodore Roosevelt, and three submarines. The Royal Navy has the carrier, HMS Invincible, the submarine, HMS Splendid, and two frigates. HMS Grafton and HMS Iron Duke. Royal Marine commandos on board the two frigates would play a significant role in the proposed visit and search" missions against suspect tankers.

The major question being asked at the summit yesterday was how Nato would react if faced by a Russian oil tanker bound for Bar. At the weekend the Kremlin made it clear that it would not respect a Nato-led oil embargo. "We cannot do anything to worsen the suffer-. ing of the people in Yugoslavia, and we will continue delivering oil in keeping with our international commitments." lgor Ivanov, Russia's Foreign Minister, said. American officials made it clear that the naval blockade would cover all countries, including Russia. They added that the operation could be in force soon.

Kosovo tests Nato's world enforcer role

FROM BEN MACINTYRE IN WASHINGTON

NATO'S ambidous blueorint the security challenges of the for military intervention beyond the alliance's borders has been unveiled while that strategy is being put the test dramatically in Kosovo.

The outward-looking philosophy underpins Nato's interventionist determination, but has also exposed fresh divisions within the alliance while emphasising that its very future is at stake in the Balkans.

"We have reaffirmed our readiness to address regional and ethnic conflicts beyond the territory of Nato members," President Clinton said as the "Strategic Concept" was presented during the alliance's 50th anniversary summit in Washington. The concept pro-vides Nato with "a road map" for military crises, according to Javier Solana, its Secretary-General - transforming a mutual defence agreement into a regional policeman willing and able to use its collective power to intervene when faced with ethnic conflagration, ter-rorism and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

Nato recognised the European Union's expanding role in defence policy and its right to approve military action where not all Nato members were new century", Mr Clinton said. The oming could hardly be more sensitive; when plan-ners began addressing the question five years ago they little expected it would face such an immediate, defining and potentially damaging test.

If Nato's Kosovo policy fails, then the strategic concept will have been shown to be a failure before it was born. "The stakes for Nato are Nato," one senior US policymaker said. Differences within the alliance have been reflected in the blueprint's drafting, most notably over the UN's role. President Chirac of France said a passage recognising the UN's "primary responsibility" for maintaining international peace and security made it clear that Nato could not, and would not, act without UN authorisation - an interpretation contradicted by Senor Solana, who said a Security Council resolution would not be necessary before making an intervencion outside Nato territory.

Members also agreed to expand intelligence-sharing. find ways to defend members against nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, and head off a growing gap in military technology between America and the other 18 allies.

Oil embargo 'illegal'

A NATO blockade of Yugo-slav ports and the fercible inspection of approaching oil tankers would be a breach of international law, experts said yesterday. legal Stopping neutral ships on the high seas could be justified only if sanctioned by the United Nations or as a Hear act of self-defence, one expert said, "It would require a new declaración.

Nato might argue that the action was justified under an extension of the doctrine of self-defence. But a unitaeral declaration to that effect nlight not win international acceptance. To stop and board ships otherwise would be seen at ageression against the flag under which they were sailing.

to argue that Security Council Resolution 1160, which last month imposed an arms embargo on Yugoslavia, included wording that prohibited ships from carrying arms and related materiel — and this could be stretched to include oil. But that resolution still does not authorise the use of furce.

After the invasion of Kuwait, Britain and America imposed a naval blockade on Irag. But Washington insisted on a different form of words so as not to force the invocation of the American War Powers Act. Its actioo, called a "navai interdiction", was subsequently upheld by the UN. Yugoslavia receives only a fraction of its oil by sea. Until the airstrikes began, most of the 54,000 barrels it imported each day came from Russia (12,000 barrels). Ukraine, Greece, Bulgaria, Romania and the European Union. Most unrefined oil was imported through two main pinelines, from Croatia and Hungary. These have been closed. Oil, especially from Russia, also came by barge up the Danube Robin Cook, the Foreign Secretary, said yesterday that this was a main reason for blocking the river by bringing down the bridges. Yugoslavia produces a further 18,000 barrels a day of its own oil. Only small quantities of refined oil come to Bar, on the Montenegrin coast, and have to be taken inland by lorry.

UN urges Britain to THE U.K. take more refugees

By RICHARD FORD, HOME CORRESPONDENT

BRITAIN was under pressure last night to take more Kosovan refugees after a row erupted over the small number to arrive since bombing started.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) called on the Government to accept thousands like other European states.

As the first plane, carrying lól refugees, arrived in York-shire, Lyndall Sachs, a spokeswoman for the UNHCR. urged the Government to allow more in.

She said: "At present we have 35 countries who have of-fered about 100,000 places. and countries such as Germany have just doubled their intake. Originally they were taking 10,000. They have already doubled that to 20,000. Britain needs to assist in burden-sharing from the area."

Unless more refugees were flown out of Macedonia, the Balkan state might take drastic action and push them across the borders, she said.

The assault on the Government's position was reinforced by Olaru Ottunnu, the personal representative of Kofi Annan, the UN Secretary-

General, who also called on Britain to take more refugees. Referring to the refugees' arrival yesterday, Mr Ottunnu told ITV's Dimbleby programme: "I'm very pleased by this gesture. More is needed, both on the part of Britain and other Western countries. And they must also, more significantly, provide more support for the host families in Albania and Macedonia."

But Clare Short, the International Development Secretary. said the Government's duty was to look after people in the region and get them back to their homes. It was right to accept only those with special medical needs or who had relatives in Britain, she said.

"Of course we should help. especially needy cases. But flying people to Europe will not deal with the refugee problem. And our real duty is to defeat this evil, to look after people in the region and get them back home as soon as possible."

Tory demand for conflict inquiry

A commission of inquiry into the origins and conduct of Nato's offensive against Belgrade should be set up after the fighting ends. the Conservative Party proposed yesterday (Philip Webster writes). Michael Howard, the Shadow Foreign Secretary, said that the kind of far-reaching investigation that followed the Falklands war should be established to look into the "failure of diplomacy" that preceded the confliet, and some of the decisions taken during 1.

Mr Howard and William Hague yesterday maintained Opposition support for Nato's stance, including the possibility of using ground forces, but Mr Howard called for more clarity from the Government on issues such as the legal basis for a blockade against Serbia.

A report, published today on the eve of the 50th anniversary of the modern Commonwealth's founding, also calls for a permanent "enforcer" to investigate breaches of human rights and a decision-making body of Commonwealth High Commissioners to resolve crises.

The report is published by the Foreign Policy Centre, headed by Mark Leonard, a young new Labour activist who advised the Government on "rebranding Britain" and drew up a pamphlet on modernising the monarchy. The policy centre is a think-tank created to shake-up the Foreign Office.

It says that in the past 50 years the Commonwealth's idealism has evaporated. Most of its 1.6 billion people know next to nothing about it, and few can name the Secretary-General (Chief Emeka Anyaoku).

Among other measures to revitalise the 54-nation organisation, the report calls for a new declaration on democracy and human rights; a heavyweight political figure to examine abuses; and a standing council of top ambassadors (known as high commissioners) to refer problems to the Commonwealth Ministers Action Group. It also suggests better auditing and targeting of public money on democracy and economic development issues.

From the new armoury of judges' powers he singled out the "offer to settle": if a claimant makes an offer that is rejected by the defendant, and the offer is later matched at trial, the defendant can be ordered to pay interest at 10 per cent above base rate - say 17 per cent - on the Lord Woolf said. "Now people will have to mean what they say."

Some lawyers fear the changes will increase costs in the early stages of litigation, but most believe the re-forms are well overdue. John Hull, a litigation partner with Richards Butler, said: "Some lawyers are worried and fear a bumpy ride ahead. No one likes change. Irvine clashes with Law Society

BY RANCES GIBB LEGAL ORRESPONDENT

A CONTROVERSY has erupted betwen the Lord Chancellor and he Law Society over an advertising campaign launched by the society this week against cuts in legal aid.

Lord Irvine of Lairg issued a statement today deploring society advertisements to be run this week in newspapers as "irresponsible scaremongering". In efect accusing the society of lying and misrepre-sentation, hegoes on: "Many vulnerable reople will be made to believe that they will lose their access to legal aid. That is just not true."

Lord Irvirk is said to have been furious when advertisement proofs were shown to his department on Friday. He accuses solicions of being motivated by wirry over their incomes, saying "the Govern-ment canno be expected to protect evely solicitor from change".

Advertisements Isuch as the one on page 6 of today's Times have been drawn up as part of he Law Society's campaign against proposals to reform te £1.6 billion legal aid scheme contained in the Access to astice Bill.

It will amove legal aid for most personal injury claims. Lawyers ire expected to take such case on a "no win, no fee" bass, with insurance firms projeding cover.

LibDem hopefuls step aside in bid to block Kennedy

crats are preparing to step aside to allow Menzies Campbell to become the main "stop Charles Kennedy" candidate in the party's leadership race. Mr Campbell, the Liberal Democrat foreign affairs spokesman whose profile is rising through regular appearances to comment on Nato's action against Belgrade, is expected to emerge as the figure most committed to carrying on Paddy Ashdown's policy of close relations with Labour. Nick Harvey, the Liberal Democrat communications chief and one of the contenders to succeed Mr Ashdown, has indicated that he will pull out to support Mr Campbell. And over the weekend, senior Liberal Democrats were putting pressure on Don Foster, the education spokesman, to do the same to give Mr Campbell what one strategist described as a "sporting chance" of de-feating Mr Kennedy, thought contest in the days after Mr Ashdown's surprise resignation announcement in January, is now strongly expected to throw his hat into the ring. He is perceived by Liberal Democrat MPs to have had a "good war", supporting the EU warning on 'separatism'

The European commissioner for regional policy has warned against the dangers of nationalism. Asked about the SNPs policy of independence within Europe, Monika Wulf-Mathies cited the Yugoslav war as an example of what could go wrong when small states were created. "I don't think this kind of separatist approach would be a very European one."

Chernobyl call by Green Party

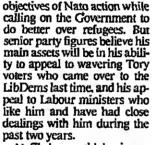

The Scottish Green Party is commemorating the 13th anniversary of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster by calling for nuclear power to be replaced with renewable energy sources. The party's principal speaker. Marian Coyne, said hill-farmers were still coping with the consequences of the accident.

QUOTE of the day

It's a silly and self-contradictory report from the daft end of the political spectrum SNP response to study showing independence could cost £10bn.

At 57, he would be in an ideal position to "bring on" younger MPs such as Mr Harvey after a few years in charge.

Mr Kennedy, one of the party's few MPs with star quality because of his high media profile, quickly became favourite to replace Mr Ashdown. He is portrayed as less keen on dealings with Labour, al-though Tony Blair is known to be relaxed about his succeeding Mr Ashdown.
Last week Mr Harvey said that he was issuing a "call to arms" to colleagues to sit down together and decide who really had the best chance of winning. The election was not an "ego trip", he said, and added: "It is not an absolute necessity for me to be a candidate."

Asked if he would back Mr Campbell, Mr Harvey replied that they "looked at things in a similar way" and would support candidates who took the party in a similar direction. Mr Campbell told The Times: "I intend to make my final decision after the elections on May 6. But obviously a development of this kind and the position which Nick Harvey is adopting will play a substantial part in my decision. I think we view the direction the party should take in very similar terms."

The growing awareness among "project anti-Kennedy contenders" that only one can stand has yet to be mirrored by the more radical group of potential candidates. They include party spokesmen Jack-ie Ballard (local government), Simon Hughes (health), and David Rendel (social security).

The election campaign will begin formally on June 11 and end in mid-July. The result will be given in early August.

Connery rallies Scots

By GILLIAN HARRIS SCOTLAND CORRESPONDENT

SEAN CONNERY will make an impassioned plea for Scots to embrace independence at a rally today aimed at revitalising the Scottish National Party's election campaign.

In his first political speech. the former "James Bond" will urge an invited audience of 300 to fight to ensure that the SNP secures victory in the Holyrood elections.

With 12 days to go before polling day, it is hoped that

Connery, who is the SNP's most famous supporter, will galvanise activists who have been crushed by opinion polls showing that Labour has gained a 20-point lead.

The SNP promise that his speech, to which he put the finishing touches yesterday, will be "confident and inspiring". The actor was offered help in composing his address by the party leader. Alex Salmond, and the chief executive, Mike Russell, but said he preferred to use his own words.

The rally, at the Edinburgh

International Conference Centre, is being billed as the highlight of the SNP's five-week election campaign. Mr Salmond and the SNP president. Winnie Ewing, will also make speeches. Later, Mr Salmond and Connery, who donates large sums to the SNP, will go on a walkabout in the city.

Preparations for the rally have gone ahead in an upbeat atmosphere despite the party's poll showing. SNP leaders last week decided to take their message over the heads of the media directly to the voters.

Cheese makers' threat to quit Britain Revision 182

Red tape and over-harsh inspection regulations are putting squeeze on small firms, Valerie Elliott reports SPECIALIST cheese makers are threatening to close their businesses and move abroad unless the Government's "hygiene police" relaxes enforcement of dairy controls.

costly inspection checks and zealous enforcement by officials are threatening the livelihood of the country's 120 small specialist cheese producers.

They believe that the blitz is in response to a spate of E. coli poisonings and part of a plan to ban all unpasteurised milk from dairy products, even at the expense of family firms that have produced only safe

This week industry representatives are to meet Michael Wills, the Small Business Minister, to press for the exemption of small cheese makers from regulations and controls that they say are more appropriate for large corporations.

Arthur Cunynghame, the managing director of Paxton and Whitfield, the 200-yearold London cheese shop that. supplies the Royal Family, said that ministers were hiding a plan to ban unpasteurised milk behind EU regulations. He said that the 165 pages of proposed new dairy hygiene rules would befuddle a corporate lawyer, let alone a small producer. Mr Cunynghame, who is also president of the Specialist Cheesemakers Association, argues that all cheese manufacturers are governed by the Food Safety Act 1990, which he says is sufficient regulation.

The plight of the cheese makers has resulted in a new alliance of small producers, including sheep farmers, wine growers and abattoir owners. who also face new controls. They are soon to form an allparty Campaign for Independ-ent Foods to lobby ministers. Among those leading the group are the Countess of

Mar, who produces her own goats' cheese, John Redwood, the Tory Trade and Industry spokesman, Paul Tyler, the Liberal Democrat shadow Leader of the House, and Mark Todd, the Labour MP for South Derbyshire. Lady Mar, a crossbencher in the Lords said last night that most regulations were intended to cover a factory proc-ess in which different people performed various tasks. "It is in the interests of family firms to produce a clean.

wholesome, flavoursome product that is not going to blight their reputation. There is far more personal control than in a factory," she said. Lady Mar said that if small producers went out of business, village communities would also be affected. Leon Downey, whose chee-sery in West Wales has made Llangloffan brand for more than 20 years, said that he would not hesitate to move to France if there was any sign that the Government intended to ban unpasteurised milk. He makes more than 15 tonnes of cheese each year, and his best selling brand is an unpasteur-ised hard variety.

know nothing about cheese making, its principles or methods. They want to pasteurise everything . . . but then people will start to lose their immunity," he said. Mr Downey fears that the Government will double the number of checks on his farm. At the moment, the annual Ministry of Agriculture cow shed inspection costs him £94, and two more milk tests £120. He is particularly worried about plans to ensure that a cheese from every batch should be sent for microbiological testing. The £50 tests could cost him as much as £300 a week.

In most recent tests the caliform bacteria count in his cheese was -1. "To pass the test you have to be less than 100,"

he said. "The total bacterial count must be less than 20,000

Last night a Ministry of Agriculture spokesman said that the department was still consulting the industry over proposals to increase hygiene checks on raw milk and raw milk products.

The checks, he said, were the alternative to banning raw milk from lood products altogether. "We welcome and will listen to the views of the small cheese producers," he said. ☐ Netlinks: cheese information: www.cheese.com

Teachers deaf to appeal of 'golden hellos'

BY A CORRESPONDENT

THE Government's "golden hello" scheme to attract graduates into teaching has failed to halt the recruitment crisis, a head teachers' leader said yes-

John Dunford, the general secretary of the Secondary Heads Association, said that some schools would soon be unable to fill posts in subjects such as foreign languages be-cause too few young people were joining the profession.

More than two thirds of the way through the recruitment year, applications for courses starting in September look set to fall short of last year's level of 14,000. The Education Department's target is 16,800, which it says is "more realistic" than the 19,000 it had aimed for last year. A spokesman said vesterday that it was too early to say whether the target would be met. Covernment concern at the low level of applications last year led to the introduction in October of golden hellos worth E5,000 for applicants to train for teaching key subjects, such as maths and science. Mr Dunford said, however, that the number of applications to teach subjects such as French. business, history and English was plummeting.

"What has the Government done about it? First they reduced the targets for secondary recruitment. Then they expressed delight that ... appli-cations for postgraduate re-cruitment for maths and science courses have been met as a result of their golden hello scheme. In fact, these figures mask a worsening of the recruitment crisis."

While there has been a 24 per cent increase in students registering for maths courses, a 16 per cent increase for biology, 13 per cent for chemistry and 4 per cent for physics, there has been a 21 per cent drop in registrations for training as French teachers. 26 per cent for business studies, 10 per cent for history, 15 per cent for art, 6 per cent for English and 5 per cent for religious studies.

The first thing we will see is schools not able to deliver the National Curriculum in foreign languages, because they simply do not have the teachers," Mr Dunford said.

"While you can perhaps convert someone quite quickly into a maths or a science teachет. perhaps bringing someone in from industry, you can't get someone to learn a foreign language that quickly and then learn bow to teach it."

David Bennett, head teacher at Sackville School in East Grinstead, West Sussex, told the conference he had been forced to recruit a German teacher from a shortlist of one and "ended up being interviewed by the candidate".

An Educadon Department spokesman said: "We are determined to tackle recruitment issues, and the Green Paper on teachers' pay is aimed at modernising the profession and will attract more people." The Green Paper proposes performance-based pay rises of up to £40,000 for classroom teachers, but has met considerable opposition from unions. BY MICHAEL HORSNELL

A TRAFFIC policeman who was run down and dragged 100 yards by a hit-and-run driver died in hospital yester-

PC Jeffrey Tooley, 26, was carrying out a routine speed check on the A259 in Shoreham, West Sussex, on Saturday night when he was struck by the van, apparently deliberately. He sustained head injuries in the incident, involving a white Renault Trafic van, and died 12 hours later. The fire brigade was later called to a burning vehicle at a farm near Brighton and police were investigating to establish whether it was the van involved it was later taken away for forensic tests. "All his colleagues are extremely saddened and devastated by his loss", said Assistant Chief Constable Tony Lake. We have opened an incident room and are treating this as a major crime.

"PC Tooley was a highly regarded officer and he died doing a routine job, a speed check that hundreds of officers do every day. His death is very, very sad for the force and for Sussex as a whole."

Detective Superintendent Alan Ladley, who is leading the murder inquiry, said: "He was knocked down by a van that failed to stop. He suffered serious head injuries and despite being taken to Worthing Hospital died shortly before noon.

"We desperately need to trace this vehicle. It was a white Renault Trafic which witnesses have described as having distinctive stripes down the side, possibly green in colour."

He added: "Most of all I appeal to the driver of the van to come forward and talk to us about what happened."

PC Tooley was wearing a reflective jacket and carrying a torch in a well-lit area just before midnight on Saturday when the incident occurred. He was with a fellow officer carrying out routine speed checks when the van swerved into the centre of the road and hit him.

"We are concerned this might have been a deliberate act which is why we are treating it as a murder inquiry at the moment. Mr Ladley

Max Factor's enlightened attitude would be even more laudable had not all Madonna's crows' feet and laughter lines been airbrushed into oblivion. To be fair, Max Factor is by no means the only cosmetics company guilty of this sleight of hand. Revion appears to have an aversion to showing real flesh in its ads (it has pores). Still, times have changed since Rossellini was shoddily treated. Dayle

Haddon, a Seventies model who worked as a dishwasher in the Eighties to support her young daughter, recently saw her book, Ageless Beauty, heading up The New York Times bestseller list. Having struggled in the late Eighties to get beauty companies to adopt her as a mature spokesperson (she was 39), she founded her own company. Dayle Haddon Concepts, and the phone started ringing. A Clairol contract was followed by one for Estée Lauder. For the past four years she has been the face of L'Oréal's Plenitude Revitalist. Karen Graham, another Seventies cover girl. is the model for Estee Lauder Resilience Lift, Maud Adams, an Eighties Bond girl, is the president and company face of Marja Entrich Green Collection, a Scandinavian line. Given that women over 35 account for 60 per cent of the market, this can only be to their benefit, make-up companies ignore these demographies at their peril.

Madonna had no problems applying berself to modelling. "I think she was flattered to be asked," says Ann Francke of Procter & Gamble, which owns Max Factor. "And when she realised that past house models included Bette Davis and Rita Hayworth she really threw herself into things."

Madonna's enthusiasm induded choosing the make-up artist Sarah Monzani, who created her Forties look in Evita and is now turning her into a bronzed ("it's time-consuming; Madonna never tans') Californian yoga teacher for her role opposite Rupert Ever-ett in The Next Best Thing. "She's not afraid to use makeup. On Evita she'd put in her teeth and eyes (she wore a veneer to cover the gap in her front teeth and brown contact lenses) and she'd become Eva Perón." It takes commitment to wear veneers, contacts and lashings of fake tan, but if the part demands it ... For ber next campaign perhaps she'll even sport the odd wrinkle.

MARKS & SPENCER has taken so many knocks recently that it seems almost spiteful to sling yet more arrows its way. However, I had to checkout its summer offerings ... the best pieces were the stretch cotton shirt with threequarter-length sleeves, E30; the Irish linen range, which had hooded sleeveless tops for £26, and bias-cut long skirts in black or stone for £40; and some sporty hybrids such as a grey sleeveless shirt that came with a drawstring skirt, both in a grey polyester mix that looks like lightweight wool but is machine-washable. It isn't a buge cache of goodies considering the amount of merchandise oo offer in the Marble Arch store, and it slots into the useful rather than the irresistible category. I can't help thinking that until it takes more notice of fashion trends, everything on its rails will look a little limp.

GEORGE WALDEN: MEMOIRS OF AN ANTI-POLITICIAN

When I think of William Hague in

In the first extract from Lucky George, the outstanding political memoir of the year, George Walden, the former diplomat and Tory minister and an acute observer of the Westminster scene, gives his candid — and often caustic — opinion on some of the leading figures in the Conservative Party

oming back to Westminster after the 1992 election made me more doubtful than ever about whether I had done the right thing in standing again. Major had triumphed. Maastricht was coming to the boil, and the Right was in vengeful mood. During his election Major had made an attempt to draw me into his cirele. Sarah Hogg, his campaign manager, asked me to No 10 to sound me out about writing speeches for him, but I backed off smartly. And later, when David Mellor sounded me out over lunch about returning to the Government, perhaps at Major's insrigation, I made it clear that I was not interested. I had nothing against him how could anyone? - and certainly did not despise him. He was a conscientious man doing a near impossible job and t respected his pertinacity. It was just that I could never convince myself that he was Prime Minister or, come to that, a real person at all. The most important thing about him was his face. His features were familiar to the point of banality, yet at the same rime completely unreal. At first glance everything seemed right; one more glance and you saw it was lotally wrong, an assemblage of parts that did not fit. Major was a self-made man in more senses than one, a composite person whose features fitted together as awkwardly as his sentences. It was as if the British nation, in a fit of literal-mindedness. had decided that if we were going to have a truly representa-tive Prime Minister, then we must construct one who reflected its every physical and character trait. And needless to say. the construct came out awry.

With his moderate instincts. his decency, honesty, sense of fair play, stubbornness, stylelessness, inarticulacy and lack of imagination, sometimes you felt that he was the most represeniative Prime Minister we had ever had, and that you could no more object to John Major than you could to the country as a whole. The trouble was that, after a brief flirtation with this benign caricature of itsell, the country did object. They thought they wanted someone like themselves as Prime Minister, and when they had got him they began to think that it was not what they relations came before a crucial Maastricht vote. I was planning to abstain and the whips were desperately trying to convince me that if I and one or two others did not go through the right lobby, the Government would fall. Half an hour before the ten o'clock vote

Major called me into his office. He looked in a poor way and I felt He looked in sorry for him. I was feeling a bit sorry for myself. I had got myself into a tricky position. I opposed Maastricht because t feared it was a treaty too far which would eventually damage Europe by taking integration beyond its natural limits. Other rebels opposed it because they had an ideowere populist chauvinists. It was from fear of being listed in the political company of Bill Cash or Teresa Gorman that I was abstaining rather than voting against. Now, like Major, I was in a corner.

I explained my position. After rambling on about the dan-gers. he suddenly said: "I didn't ask for this job." I had heard he was getting low, but this seemed to me an unacceptable thing for a Prime Minister to say, and I felt oddly indignant. If my composite leader couldn't convince himself that he really was the Prime Minis-

"You can't say that Prime Minister," I told him curtly. "Any other minister can say it but you. They are appointed but you appoint yourself." His remark was pathetic, but the pathos worked. When you feel sorry for people you do not to make life more difficult for them. It was one of those rare moments in Parliament when the way you vote logical aversion to Europe or might actually matter, and I had to choose between my misgivings about Maastricht and the risk of bringing the Government down, or at least fatally weakening it. Unable to face being lumped in with the Europhobes, in the end I swallowed my pride and, ingloriously, voted for the Government. They were lucky I

Major won by three votes. To judge by his frame of mind that night he seemed in a mood to resign. I don't recall Major thanking me: perhaps the man who had told me that he hadn't asked to be Prime Minister didn't really want to winter, how could anyone else?

1996: The Conservative Government ground on. One day Major came into the Tea Room. As usual I felt uncomcriticised him from time to time yet he was always smilingly courteous. An achingly decent man struggling to hold the Government and party to-

Major left off eating his jam scone and reached for the Standard: "Now, George, let's have a look at your stars. What sign are you?"

Major solemnly looked up my horoscope and read it out 'In spite of all your work in an important area of your life you may not have succeeded as you had hoped. Don't go on doing something you don't enjoy."

I laughed and hastily diverted the conversation. Only John Major could give you a new respect for horoscopes. The previous evening I had discussed with Sarah the modalities of giving up my seat.

John Major: an achingly decent man assembled from parts that never quite fit frenzied optimism is mounting in direct proportion to the slump in the party's electoral fortunes. They go on pretending that victory will somehow be snatched from the jaws of disaster even when those jaws, in one by-election after another, are blting lumps out of the party's living flesh. And, of course, their hopes are pinned on neo-nationalism. Europhobia is breeding a crazed euphoria. Bolstered by the propaganda in the

AS polling day approaches, a sort of Right-wing press, more and more Conservatives believe that all you have to do to dispose of new Labour is to strike super-patriotic postures. Say boo to Johnny foreigner and the voters will flock to you. To me they appear as raving romantics, as desperate for an enemy as we once were for a role, and subconsciously transporting our late and deeply mouroed adversary from Moscow to Brussels. John Redwood is running about in jaunty clothes, his saturnine features swathed in a manic grin. He has just stood against Major and is delighted with the publicity, which he sees as a successful first step to persuading the country that he is a human being. The trouble is, the more he tries to behave like a normal person, the madder he looks. Redwood is studiously courteous to me, since I have publicly threatened to leave the party if he is elected leader, and he wants to show what a big, forgiving man he is. One evening I find myself sitting opposite Redwood at dinner in the Commons. Tonight he is excelling himself, crazier than ever, got up in light suit and bright tie, and as I listen to his demented talk about how useless German cars are, oh no, a Jaguar for him every time, be's so bloody patriotic he's got two of them, I am tempted to look under the table to see whether he is cross-gartered, in yellow.

From strutting Churchillian to everybody's friend s the Tory party splits asunder on Europe and a great void opens in the middle, the choice is to line up with one side or the other, and I am tempted by neither. What the party fails to notice is that, in so far as they spend their time thinking about Europe at all, the electorate are camped on the territory that the bulk of the party has vacated: somewhere in the

Amid all this, Michael Portillo strides about the Commons like a man of destiny. Our Minister of Defence moves with Churchillian mien and fateful tread, as if preparing to announce his decision to loose off a battery of nukes against - well, whom exactly? That is Portillo's problem: against whom to defend our imperilled nationhood.

I had got to know him when he replaced me as a PPS, and liked him more as an individual than as a public man. He was certainly bright, and a competent Minister of Defence, yet he is a man with a problem. The trouble with Portillo is that he is immature. The immaturity stems from his obsession with his name and appearance, and from the fact that outside policies he is a highly inexperienced

God knows we all have our problems, and our aspirations are invariably dogged by our past, but I can think of no other politician who faces the same hurdle as Portillo: to become Prime Minister of Great Britain while convincing the electorate and himself of his Britishness. His insecurity as to his nationality seems so deep as to be ineradicable. One can only suppose that he was twitted at school about his black hair, thick lips and "dago" name and never got over it. The narrowness of his background — from Harrow to Cambridge to politics, with not much in between - makes things worse. Had he done National Service or seen a bit of the world all that sensitivity about his origins would have been knocked out of him

The irony is that his foreignness is a problem for no one but himself. He seems not to

He could be an outstanding politician if only he stopped fretting about himself and got to know his country. As it is, Portillo in full patriotic cry sounds distinctly foreign, for all the world like some Argentine general banging on about la pa-tria in his bemedalled uniform and braided cap.

CHASTENED by the loss of his seat, now he is sliding from one extreme to the other. Out go the Churchillian mien and fateful tread. Now we are called on to admire a brand Portillo's new persona will not work. He is certainly succeeding in forcing himself on our attention. With William Hague as his chief rival, that may not be saying much.

So maybe one day Portillo will make it. In a sense I hope he does, if only because his neuroses are more interesting than Hague's genial vacuity. Somehow our self-styled de Gaulle contrives to impart the feeling that he is waiting in the wings for the nation's call and who knows, maybe the call will come?

ortillo is a far from dis-likeable man who commands loyalty among his supporters, whose very uncertainty about himself can evoke sympathy, and who could yet insinuale himself into the nation's affections through his television series and the rest. One can imagine a scenario some years ahead where Portillo is back in the House, William Hague is ditched as ineffectual. Portillo replaces him, Labour find themselves in economic trouble, economic and monetary union explodes six months after we join in a sod's law replay of the ERM, and Portillo gets in by a landslide on a quasi-nationalist ticket.

How would our national saviour make out in office? The judgment of a politician who is perpetually trying to convince people of something about himself will always be suspect, so we must hope that this able and intelligent man is bright enough to throw off some of the Little England riffraff surrounding him, and to learn from mistakes.

WHEN I heard that Chris Pat-len was being considered as Governor of Hong Kong, I felt concerned. For all his talents and "wotcher, cock" amiability, I was by no means sure that he was the man to steer the place through the years ahead. I told him that he would find himself dealing with two sets of intolerable people: the Chinese Communists, who were among the biggest bastards in God's creation. and the local Chinese fat cats.

who had crushed students under tanks in the presence of the world's cameras, could be sensitised to the need for more democracy in Hong Kong by public pressure alone.

Hurd was his usual let's be sensible and keep steady" self. The only reassurance he could offer was that Americans were foursquare behind us. I watched for signs of their support, and saw what I had expected: the White House proclaiming the sanctity of human rights at the top of its voice then instantly buckling under the pressure of the US business lobby.

I was indignant about what saw as a hypocritical British policy, endorsed for opportunistic reasons by all sides of the House. Our late conversion to democracy in Hong Kong was essentially a conscience-salving exercise: to assuage our guilt in handing back a colony we had taken under the immoral circumstances of the Opium War to an immoral regime. Far from being heroic and altruistic, our stance seemed to me to be self-serving. and, in a sense, cynical. There was every chance that our tacocs would end up leaving the people of Hong Kong with less democracy, not more. Which is exactly what happened.

Not everyone was blind to what was happening. Quite a few Tory backbenchers took the view that, in their words, Pamen had "buggered it up". But Hong Kong was not the son of issue that led to backbench rebellions.

So the British decked themselves out in their moral finery, and the charade took its course. The Royal Yacht sailed in, the retreat was movingly orchestrated, Patten's friend Jonathan Dimbleby made a hagiographic TV film based on his still more hagiographic book The Last Governor and "honour" was satisfied. The Chinese had their pretext to undermine the elected Legisla-tive Council, and proceeded to do so, so everyone was happy. One crucial, unanswered question remains. Before Patien was appointed, a confidential understanding defining the degree of democracy Hong Kong would enjoy had been reached between the British and Chinese Governments. and enshrined in an exchange of leners signed by Douglas Hurd. It is hard to think of anything more central to Patien's mission, yet in The Last Governor Dimbleby says that Panen had not seen or heard of the letters before the confrontational speech he made after his arrival. No wonder the Chinese Communists called Patten a double-dealer.

For reasons best known to himself, Dimbleby fails to answer the central question: how could Hurd, who had signed must have been in the know, have failed to warn Patten? Dimbleby shuffles the blame on to officials, and quotes Hurd as chiding them for not reminding him to show the vital letters to the new Governor. This explanation is unconvincing. Why did Hurd and Major not tell Patten personaly that there might be some difficulty about re-engaging the battle for democracy, on ac-count of how they had long since sold the pass? If he was kept in the dark. Patten would seem to have a legitimate grievance. Yet given the relation-ships involved, we seem unlikely to discover the truth from the luvvie circle of Dimbleby/Hurd/Major/Patten.

and McKinsey past there is something of the nerd about him: what can you say of a man who since his early teens has been trainspotting MPs? Of course he's good at PM's Question Time: he's been playing at being Prime Minister all his life. It's just bad luck on him that Question Time, in the popular imagination, has ceased to be important. Pity he didn't go through the normal phases of being a Green or a Trotskyist. Like those infuriating voters who say "Don't worry about me, I've always voted Tory", you want to say to him, look, you're an intelligent fellow, has it never crossed your mind, not even once, that there could be another way of looking at things?

He has all Major's niceness and decency, in corporate form, and there seems no harm in him because where there is no personality there can be no harm. In all the years we were in Parliament together somehow I can't recall a single thing he has ever said or done that is of

When I think of William Hague, nothing occurs to me.

Not giving a sod is Ken's forte

POOR Ken Clarke battles on, genially exasperated, and you have to hand it to a man who never lets his exasperation drown his geniality. In his position I might be tempted to hit someone. He invites me to a meeting with half a dozen colleagues to discuss electoral strategy (why me, I cannot imagine). The meeting is a waste of time. The jel-lagged, florid-faced Chancellor cannot breathe a word without some Euro-maniac saying, well that's all very well, ken, but what about EMU and the convergence criteria? What is really astounding about him is that, while most other pro-Europeans are busily trimming. Ken just goes on saying what he thinks.

One evening I ask him where he's off to next. Southern France, he says, and boy am I looking forward to it. All that fantastic food and wine, superb weather. I love it down there! I find myself glancing round to see who's listening. This is traitorous stuff, like a Soviet finance minister saying he is off on a trip to the West and by Christ is he glad to get out of this hole. For this is a party where allegedly grown-up people like William Cash go round saying they don't like continental wines, never have done give me Australhave done, give me Australian any day. When I select burgundy in preference to oceanic or South African at dinner, jokes are made about francophilia. But of course they are not jokes. This party is not just sick unto its soul. it's sick unto its liver.

Ken doesn't give a sod. Not giving a sod is Ken's forte, and being a lazy sod somehow increases the attraction. He is too indolent to care what becomes of him in the party. If you want me as leader, he seems to be saying, take me as I am, along with my thoroughly genuine and touchingly non-represen-tational wife. Ken and Mrs Ken are the least political. pair in Parliament and therefore, in the eyes of a non-politician like myself, greatly to be applauded. The trouble is that behind it all he would be very happy to be leader, but knows he is going nowhere.

The paradox of our Ken is that the bluff outspoken pro-European is a super patriot. a professional Maneunian who seems to think that we are every bit as good as we were and have a monopoly of common sense. So why all the fear and defensiveness about Europe? In a curious way his cavalier optimism about the single currency and European integration is as much a form of British complacency as the Euro-phobes' opposition. He thinks we are above it all and can bluff our way through. Have another one? Well, kind of you to ask, I think I will. Cheers! The last time I saw him was after the elections. By then he had lost his leadership challenge and was as far out in the new Tory party as it is possible to be. A couple of months earlier he had been Chancellor of the Exchequer: now he was sitting alone in the Garrick. He joined us for dinner, and was as much himself as ever. No bitterness, no venom, just lots of enthusiasm about a bird-watching trip he was planning. His future seems to be to turn into one of our parliamentary characters, of the more entertaining variery, though it seems a waste.

cold, unpleasant rain is falling on the French capital. The Seine is choppy. It is a day for right-thinking Parisians to begin lunch at 11.45am and continue eating until late afternoon. But on the Pont des Arts, several hundred people are ignoring common sense, pangs of hunger and the chill wind to witness the most successful exhibition in Paris

The bridge contains 68 sculptures by a Senegalese artist, Ousmane Sow, who was almost unknown in France until now. His large, rough-hewn fig-ures portray African tribal peoples, in-cluding the mighty Nuba wrestlers and his own slender, elegant ethnic group, the Peulhs. The centrepiece is a frieze that tells the story of the Battle of Little Big Horn. A giant and faintly African-looking Sitting Bull implores the gods to help him. A few metres along the Pont des Arts, one of General George Armstrong Custer's soldiers is scalped by a Sioux warrior.

The sculptures are the latpeople est in a series of free openair exhibitions laid on by pack the Paris Town Hall. Over the past decade, there have been works by Botero and Pont des Giacometti on the Champs Elysées and, last year, by Arts? Mark di Suvero on the Champs-de-Mars.

The announcement of this year's attempt to "bring art to the people" met, at first, with incredulity. How would sophisticated Parisians react to the powerful, sensual but unsophisticated work of Sow. French critics asked. "Everyone is extremely upset." Monae as the exhibit opened. "Absolutely everyone." Not so today. As more than 5,000 people cram morning and afternoon on to the small pedestrian bridge between the Louvre and the Académie Française, Sow has won stunning acclaim and popularity. "The African Rodin" was how Le Parisien described him. "One of the world's greatest living sculptors" was Le Monde's reconsidered verdict. A burly security guard at the Academie end of the Pont des Arts said: "The bridge is a mass of people at the weekend. You can't move and we have to let them on in small groups." The Town Hall says this is one of the most successful open-air exhibitions it has put on.

If the crowds are a surprise, then so, too, is Sow's career, Born in Dakar in 1935, he trained and worked as a physiotherapist for 30 years before turning to sculpture at the age of 50. His first shows were held in the basement of his practice in Paris, where he emigrated in the 1970s before returning to Senegal as his work started to attract critical attendon 20 years later.

His knowledge of the human body is clear and striking. The muscles on the 2.5m tall Indians at Little Big Horn are tense. The Nuba wrestlers are poised to spring forward with an earth-shaking

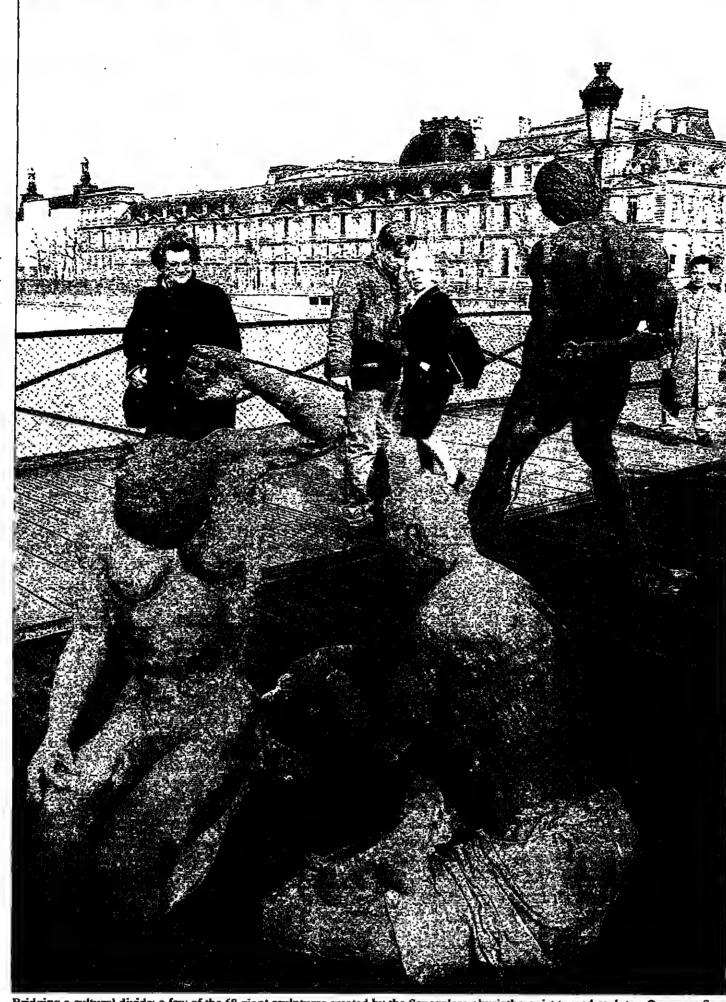

> "We live in an electronic world where we ignore what is essential," says Sow, who himself measures almost two metres. "Me, I talk of the human being." There is energy, sex and violence. "We have to struggle to conquer the woman we love," he says. "The struggle is a means of existence. His figures are built up using layers of cloth sacking around an iron frame, giving them an air of papier-maché. But the artist refuses to reveal the ingredients that go into his paste.

"It is a synthetic vegetable product that is macerated in about 20 different

He claims to seek energy and move-ment more than realism. "If you want precision, you could copy the wooden norses from roundabouts." he says. They are perfect but have no life, no depth." Yet to his crowds of new admirers. Sow is a welcome change from the highly abstract art that dominates contemporary Parisian exhibitions. This is all accessible, unlike most modern art," said Serge de la Vallée, a 43-yearold builder from Paris. "Everyone can get the gist of it straight away. It's great." So great, in fact, that he had skipped lunch to see it.

A blast from the indie past

Happy Mondays Manchester

The recent glut of pop group reunions has produced few comebacks more unlikely than that of Happy Mondays. The Man-chester band famous for inventing indie-dance music split acrimoniously six years ago. The only member to have been heard of since is the singer Shaun Ryder, whose brief reappearance with Black Grape came to a similarly sticky end early last year. With a big tax bill cited as the sole reason for Happy Mondays' sudden return, expectations for the six-date UK tour - which concludes this week with three sold-out shows at London's Brixton Academy - were understandably low. At the group's hometown gig on Friday night, however, the audience was in for a pleasant surprise.

Before Happy Mondays stepped on to the stage of the Evening News Arena, the sup-port DJ Paul Oakenfold took the 15,000-strong crowd back to the band's early 1990s heyday by playing classic indiedance hits such as Paris Angels' Perfume and Primal Scream's Come Together. Oakenfold launched his career by producing Happy Mondays' seminal third album Pills 'N' Thrills And Bellyaches. His presence proved to be apt. Fronted by a surprisingly fitlooking Ryder, his legendary. dancing sidekick Bez, and female vocalist Rowetta, who was dressed like a leather-clad cowgirl. Happy Mondays spent the next hour performing tracks taken almost exclu-

The only real criticism of the evening was the absence of the original guitarist Mark Day, whose unique playing style was a large part of Happy Mondays' distinctive sound. Replacement Wags, formerly of Black Grape, may have been technically better, but he could not recreate Day's endearingly haphazard chords.

The show ended with an en core of the new single The Boys Are Back In Town, and a spectacular, ten-minute rendi-

LISA VERRICO

Smoke without fire

The American playwright Alex Finlayson has something of a special relationship with the Royal Exchange Theatre. This is her third play to be premiered here, and the third to poke a penetrating finger at the social malaises of very different American cultures. Following in the nomadic footsteps of Winding The Ball (set in a supermarket in small-town USA) and Misfits (set in Hollywood), this time she pitches up on a tobacco farm in North Carolina.

The play takes place in the present, and we all know the status of smoking in America today — somewhere between the criminal and the insane. Finlayson's three generations of farmers, the Smalls, have got the weed in their blood in more ways than one. Now they find themselves the beneficiaries of a concern going nowhere. The daughter, Vette, is all for selling up and moving on. Her father, Hearon, vows to defend his birthright to the death - though not necessarily his own.

Finlayson paints in the political and economic background with a strong sense of historical perspective. David (Julian Forsyth), an English documentary-maker, is conveniently on hand to elicit Hearon's informative tirades. "Up top ev'ry one of them columns, up at the United States Capitol Build-ing, is a tobacco leaf," he rants to camera. "Tobacco built this country."

It is an intriguing business and Trevor Peacock's garrulously drawling Hearon is an entertaining guide. But Finlayson's play is essentially a tale of family strife, and here it of family strife, and here it comes unstuck. To my mind the characters are too underdeveloped for anyone to care much why Vette is such a tart or her near-speechless nephew, Reno, such a troublemaker. Both are something to do with Hearon's latent irascibility; but he, too, turns so quickly from moonshine-swigging old grump to gun-toting madman that Peacock himself looks rather taken aback by it.

Where Finlayson does score is in the quality of her dialogue and, save for some ghostly goings-on, the naturalism of her setting. The realistic sets of tobacco warehouses and fields and the cicadas on the soundtrack conjure up an almost filmic feel. The director, Gregory Hersov, finds an easy familiarity between the characters, and the talented cast are wholly watchable.

here's a slight but very positive sense of conflict about this welcome revival of Britten's "American operetta" of 1941, happily salvaged from the Royal Opera's cancelled 1999 season. First there's the sheer entertainment value of the show itself: Richard Hickox's big-boned conducting, Francesca Zambello's helpfully inventive production in Hildegard Bechtler's economic decor (wonderfully lit by Wolfgang Göbbel), the performances of each and every member of the large cast - all seem quite faultless.

At the same time one is constantly goggle-eyed at the sheer brilliance of much of the music Peter Grimes most certainly did not spring from nowhere four years later. The technical assurance of a composer still in his twenties is astounding: the craftily varied accompaniments to innocentsounding strophic numbers. the deft construction of ensembles, knowing just when, in Great Day of Discovery, to bring in brass punctuation, just where to place the modulation and lift the audience out of their seats. All this, quite apart from the basic matter of hummable tunes, denotes a born theatre composer, and one capable of engaging a popular

OPERA Paul Bunyan Sadler's Wells

All of which led to speculaoon on what might have happened had the Britten-Auden partnership not foundered, had Britten not retreated - as some hard-hearted persons still argue — into English, not to say Anglican parochialism and personal concerns with much creaking of closet doors. Bunyan looks out into the world, looks at the foundation of a new society: the later operas tend to look inward. Unprofitable speculation, of course: no one is going to complain about the series of masterpieces that followed. And one must beware of overpraising the piece. Of course there are faults: Britten isn't always in tune with Auden's flippant, Cole-Porterish verbal humour: the Swedish lumberjack's mutiny doesn't quite work; and I still have doubts about the all-too-aptly named "camp animals". But any potential flaws are minimised in Zambello's big. bold production, which won one of its awards specifically as an ensemble undertaking, which is what it is: every member of the chorus is a principal, and vice versa. It is the superbly disciplined singing of Terry Ed-wards's Royal Opera chorus that most clearly reveals Brit-ten's genius, ironically in that the piece was written essentially for amateurs.

But it is an ensemble into which an international tenor like Kurt Streit, new as Johnny Inkslinger, can fit effortlessly, and Lillian Watson's brilliant performance as the camp dog Fido almost won me round Zambello wisely eschews canine costumes). To hear a sing-er like Peter Coleman-Wright using breath control to spin long lines in the simple-sounding ballads is enormously rewarding, and the same is true of Timothy Robinson in Hot Slim's entrance Biscuit number, the catchiest in the score. Susan Gritton is enchanting as the protagonist's daughter. though her entrance, and immediate margin-gically awkward moment. But it is the ensemble that counts. The closing image shows the whole company, motionless, gazing into the audience, left on their own after the abdication of their leader to build a new world. Every single face on stage was saying something. Unforgettable.

RODNEY MILNES

CONCERTS: Beethoven gets the Richard Strauss treatment; Brahms is treated to a makeover; and a Bach expert makes allowances

Heroics coupled

RICHARD STRAUSS had his way with Mozart, as Rodney Milnes recently reported when reviewing the first UK performance of Strauss's idlosyneratic edition of Idomeneo. What he did to Beethoven pales by comparison, as we heard in the second of the City of London Sinfonia's tributes to Strauss in his 50th anniversary year.

At the end of his long, sombre elegy, Metamorphosen, the sense of deid vu experienced in hearing its main theme is evolained. This is the funeral march of Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, no less: Strauss wrote "in memoriam" beneath the notes. It was 1945; and this was a shuddering wake not only for a fellow composer, but for Munich, Bertin, Weimar and Dresden.

These resonances moved powerfully through the performance by the CLS, conducted by Richard Hick-

ox. All 23 solo strings stood to play lexcept the cellos and basses): as they passed each other fragments of Strauss's great arch of melody, first spinning them, line by line, then weaving them into complex polyphony, the players, too, seemed to be paying their own tribute.

The impression was enhanced by the fact that the Beethoven symphony was still reverberating in the air after its performance earlier in the evening. The thematic connection. though, seemed to be the only reason for this Eroica performance. Neither Hickox nor his band had a great deal to say about the work. This was a respectful, medculous and cogently argued performance. which is not, perhaps, quite all that this symphony could or should be.

Beethoven and Strauss formed a strong framework for another canny piece of programming: Haydn's cantata Arianna a Naxos. Strauss's own chamber-operatic response to the myth of the abandoned Ariadne will be heard tomorrow, but, for the time being. Christine Brewer took charge of the Haydn in no uncertain terms. Her lustrous soprano brought the distressed Arianna's questions into foreground focus before conjuring up a startled vision of the approaching Argive ship, and finally withdrawing into faded hope.

HILARY FINCH

Philbarmonia/ Thielemann : Festival Hall

A FORTNIGHT ago Daniele Gatti and the Royal Philharmonic gave us a Brahms Third recalling Karajan or Kempe. If Christian Thielemann and the Philharmonic did not invite similar comparisons with their Brahms Fourth, it was partly because this conductor invokes different antecedents, and partly because his interpretation, though remarkable, raised a doubt or two. Thickmann gave notice of his intentions with the first note: a quavering, infinitely protracted upbeat that clearly signalled much rhythmic latitude in the movement to come. Where Gatti was surging and passionate. Thielemann elected for a rhythmic flexibility that recalled his spiritual mentor, Furtwängler. Nowhere was this lantude more marked than at the approach to the recapitulation with its massive ral-

leotando which then gradually picked up speed and then stormed off in the coda. The finale similarly encompassed a broad largamente near the start and a heady ending, while the slow movement was al-lowed generous space to unfold. Evidently Thielemann was en-deavouring to create a living organism unconstrained by regular metre or unified tempo. The danger, not entirely avoided, is that such freedom sounds artificial rather than spontaneous. Yet it I had to choose between this approach on the verge of self-indulgence and the unadventurousness of so much Brahms one hears. I would op! for Thielemann's experimentalism any day.

There was less wilfulness on show in Schumann's Konzertstück for four horns and orchestra and Mozart's Violin Concerto No 3 in G. In the former, Michael Thompson stepped in at short notice to provide the principal horn part in his own edition of the work. Designed to relieve some of the superhuman difficulties of the part, his edition spreads the load among the other players (Robert McIntosh, Laurence Davies and James Handyl. In the Mozart, Christian Tetzlaff demonstrated exemplary Classical manners, but with just a hint of subjec-

It is not just a matter of knowing how Bach sounds with a period-instrument orchestra and of imitating it on modern instruments. That doesn't work. It is more a matter of making the right compromises in approximating to the ideal in terms of balance, colour and articulation. At the same time there is the question of the voices to think about, of casting the soloists and of accommodating a non-specialist chorus in the

On the other hand, there was no lack of contrast in the almost overdramanic transition from the clouded chromaticism at the end of the Crucifixus to the brilliant D major at the beginning of Et resurrexit. And in coping with what Brüggen presumably feels to be authentically brisk tempi, the ensemble survived more or less intact.

With the soloists, the compromis might have been better adjusted. Emma Kirkby, an essentially period-instrument voice, was out of place here, particular when in partnership with Catherine Wyn-Rogers, who is more operatic. In this context the two male voices. James Oxley and Neal Davis, both of them displaying unaffected integrity. were more appropriately chosen.

As for the Scottish Chamber Orchestra, while some of the instrumentalists awarded obbligato roles were more stylish than others, the high born and trumpet sound, the fluency of the oboe d'amore, the sensitivity in retaining a true halance with the soloists and chorus, the clarity of the textures - even in a cathedral setting - were admirable features of a generally serious but en-

Balkans has its price

T o Prime Minister can handle more than two crises at the same time. This old Downing Street adage is being tested to the full at present. All crises have opportunity costs — other issues do not receive the attention that they otherwise would. Decisions are not taken, or are fudged.

The domination of Tony Blair's diary by Kosovo has affected the other urgent issue. Northern Ireland. Although closely involved in attempts to break the current stalemate. as he will be again this week. Mr Blair has not been able to devote the time in intensive. ce-to-face talks that he did before the Good Friday agree-ment. He may not be able to achieve a breakthrough, but his personal role is seen as crucial on all sides.

An obvious short-term casualty of Kosovo has been Mr Blair's drive to reform the European Commission. Following the debacle over the resignation of the Commission last month, he was keen to persuade other European leaders to adopt a far-reaching reform programme linked to the appointment of Romano Prodi as President. Briosh ideas for improving internal financial controls are still on the table, but have made linle progress because talks among European leaders are dominated by Kosovo. Little is now likely to happen until after the

The domestic impact is clouded by the division of responsibility between Mr Blair and Gordon Brown. The Chancellor is now unchallenged chief executive on most economic, industrial and social issues. Peter Mandelson's resignation four months ago removed the only powerful independent voice, while John Prescott is largely absorbed in his sprawling department. Mr Brown has also taken charge of the Scottish election campaign, determining strategy and having close allies, such as Douglas Alexander, in day-to-day charge of co-ordination. If the latest polls are right, and the Scottish Nationalists are well beaten in ten days' time, that will be Mr

Brown's triumph. Downing Street insiders say that Mr Blair's preoccupation with Kosovo matters less both because departments are busy implementing decisions already taken and because there is now a lengthy period of "purdah" preventing new announcements ahead of the May o elections, and then the June 10 European elections. Mr Blair has often talked of 1999 being "the year of delivery". Departments have been set a lengthy list of targets under the public service agreements with the Treasury. But this requires constant prodding from the centre. The intervencion of the Prime Minister is often needed to overcome departmental inertia. This is just the time he should become personally involved in sorting out the mess over the future of London Underground. Even in those areas in which Mr Blair is particularly interested, such as education and health, pressure from him is needed to maintain reform. For instance, the drive to bring in appraisal of teachers and performance-related pay is at a tricky point because of opposition from the unions.

Kosovo may, in time, also affect government spending plans. Fortunately, public fi-nances are pretty healthy in the short term, so the immediate costs of the war should be absorbed without too many problems, once the Treasury and the Ministry of Defence have sorted out their usual spat about paying for replace-ment missiles and the like.

The problem is more in the long term. Provided the alliance does not fracture over the coming weeks, any lasting solution for Kosovo is likely to involve the commitment of a large number of troops there, as a peacekeeping and protec-tion force. But two fifths of the Army are already on active service, an unsustainably high proportion for a peacetime professional force. So the size of the Army will almost certainly have to be increased.

Moreover. Britain and the rest of Europe are likely to have to spend very large sums rebuilding Kosovo and helping the economies of the surrounding countries.

The danger with regional conflicts such as Kosovo is that they distract attention from global priorities. Bill Clinton has been strongly criticised by American businessmen for failing to reach an agreement with China over its ad-mission to the World Trade Organisation during the recent visit by the Prime Minister, Zhu Rongji. Integrating China into the world economy is a key Western priority, but Mr Clinton did not properly focus on the issues until too late. Germany and France have similarly feared that the West's relations with Russia might be a casualty of Tony Blair has been worried for some time that Russia's default last summer and its failure to address its deep economic problems could produce an anti-democratic and aggressively nationalist leadership. These fears have, of course, been fuelled by Kosovo, even though Russia's warnings are more a sign of weakness than of strength.

r Blair argued in his Chicago speech L on Thursday that the Cologne summit of leading industrial nations in June should adopt a package of trade, technical assistance and substantial financial help.

As Mr Blair argued, Kosovo is only the latest demonstration - others include the Asian financial crisis and transatlanoc trade tensions of increasing global interdependence. He has called for a new "doctrine of international community".

The euphoric days of the end of the Cold War are over. Surmounting these problems is going to take up much of the ome of heads of government, as well as being more expensive for their taxpayers.

fail to understand the racism that threatens the world's future if we personalise it too much on him. Yet I found Niali Ferguson's article in yesterday's Sunday Telegraph very persuasive; he linked the Columbine High School to the historic influence of Hitler. Fifty years after his death, Hitler retains his hateful fascination. His personality plays a much larger part in the contemporary world debate than those of the victorious war leaders, Stalin, Churchill or the half-forgotten Roosevelt. The only other European leader to have retained a similar hold on the public imagination 50 years after his death

massacre, the Serbian ethnic cleansing in Kosovo and the Brixton bomb

The facts are clear enough. The high school massacre was carried out by neo-Nazi fantasists who exchanged "Heil Hitler" salutes with each other and adopted German phrases and trenchcoats as symbols of their Nazi views. They targeted at least one black student because he was black. The group that has claimed responsibility for the Brixton and Brick Lane bombings, Combat 18, apparently takes its name from Hitler's initials: A is the first letter of the alphabet and H is the eighth. The Balkans have a long history of ethnic cleansing: there is an inherent racism in the attitudes of the Serbs and the Albanians towards each other. Nato has used the comparison between Hitler and Milosevic as part of its

We do not yet know precisely who planted the London bombs, but there is no reason to question the police assessment that these were racial attacks, nor is it unlikely that the bombs were made and planted by neo-Nazis. The bombs were exploded in areas of ethnic concentration at a time when they would injure or kill the largest possible number of people. Their aim must have been to terrorise the ethnic communities of these areas, and to

Whether these bombs are the start of a sustainable campaign of urban terrorism, no one can yet tell. At the least they belong to the same group of racist crimes as the Stephen Lawrence murder, or the other racist assaults and murders that have occurred too frequently in recent years. Many of these incidents have attracted linle attention, but they have spread fear and

resentment. The recruits to neo-Nazi and Brick Lane, racism goes even deeper racist groups come from the same people who form street gangs, engage in football hoofiganism or gel involved in fights outside pubs. They are not necessarily poor or unemployed, but many of them have criminal convictions or criminal associations. Some may belong to the ranks of the dropouts and the excluded, as, in his adolescence in Vienna, Hitler did.

Many are simply street bullies, who take into the street attitudes they have already shown in the playground. The Columbine High School killers were obviously intelligent, perhaps highly intelligent. The original Nazi pattern of intelligent leaders directing street thugs can be regarded as a natural one. If Combat 18 is a large enough organisation have reached this stage, it is likely to have this pattern of leadership. In the past 50 years, Britain has seen a number of these groups form. cause trouble, draw attention to themselves, then break up and fade away. Despite Enoch Powell's grim forecast, Britain has largely remained a ary 20, 1942, at which the "final stable and racially tolerant community. The Lawrence inquiry argued that racial attitudes in the Metropolitan Police were exceptionally bad. Without questioning the judgment in that case, one could equally argue that race relations in Britain as a whole have remained better than might have been expected. Yet it would not take very long for a terrorist campaign to bring that to an end. London and many other cities are now multi-ethnic communities, and such communities are vulnerable to ethnic tensions.

The Jewish community has a special understanding of the threat. Anti-Semitism is not the only form that racial prejudice takes; indeed, in modern Britain fewer people admit to ano-Semitic prejudice than to anti-black. The Brixton and Brick Lane bombs were not directed against Jews, nor was the Columbine High School massacre, nor is the ethnic cleansing in Kosovo. Yet anti-Semitism is the classic case of racial prejudice, and the Holocaust is the classic racist event of the 20th

No Jew ever believes that anti-Semitism has wholly disappeared, All Jews outside Israel, like all black or Asian people in Europe or America, have to live with the painful knowledge that there are people they meet or work with who feel an intrinsic hostility towards them. They know the little sneers that will be made, the assumptions of racial difference, the stereotyping, the exclusion. And they know how much worse has lain behind that, in medieval British history, in modern Euhistory. Jews do not forget the Holocaust, because they cannot afford to forget. I suspect that most of them think of the Holocaust, for one reason or another, every day. Many think of it more often than that.

The best account of the Holocaust that I have read is Martin Gilbert's book. His first chapter does not open with the Wannsee Conference of Janu-solution" was adopted; indeed, he reaches that conference only on page 280. He starts his book with a quotation from Martin Luther dating from 1543, almost 400 years earlier. This was Luther's "honest advice" on the treatment of Jews. "First their synagogues should be set on fire," their homes should be "broken down or destroyed", Jews should be "put under one roof, or in a stable, like Gypsies, in order that they may realise that they are not masters in our land". Jews should be put to earn their livings "by the sweat of their noses", or should be stripped of their belongings "which they have extorted usuriously from us" and driven out of the country

"for all time". One does not think of Martin Luther, the courageous leader of the Reformation, in the same terms as one thinks of Milosevic, the Columbine High School killers, the London nail bombers, or indeed Hitler.

one who understands and values the Protestant tradition of the individual conscience can fail to see Luther in an heroic light. Yet his attitude to the Jews is atrocious. His anti-Semitism is not as vicious as Hitler's, since he does not recommend that they should all be killed, but he does recommend ethnic cleansing, burning them out of home and synagogue, herding them into camps, stealing their money, even expelling them "for all time". By 1543 Luther was a man of great public prominence. This was no mere expressioo of private prejudice. Hitler saw his own anti-Semitism as a species of Darwinism. "One may be repelled by this law of nature which demands that all living things should devour one another. The fly is snapped up by the dragonfly, which is itself swal-lowed by a bird, which itself falls victim to a larger bird ... if I can accept a divine commandment, it is this one: thou shall preserve the species." He was talking, at that point, specifically about the Jews, in December 1941, just over a month before the Wannsee Conference.

t is not, I think, the ideologies used to justify racism, whether Christianity or Darwinism. that explain the evil itself. They are rationalisations; anti-Semitism and other forms of racism seem to be a basic human instinct; they show a sense of hostility to the stranger, who is perceived as a threat. Perhaps this is ultimately a Darwinian explanation, since a strong awareness of the potential threat from strangers may have been conducive to survival in the many millennia when man was still a hunter-gatherer.

It is not conducive to survival now. By the end of the 20th century, mankind is armed with many weapons of mass destruction so lethal that they cannot be used for any ordinary purposes of war. Racism, in all its aspects, is the most likely cause of future wars, and it is the present cause of tribal war in Africa and Yugoslavia. The Lawrence report stated that the Metropolitan Police were "institutionally racist". Perhaps they are. The greater worry is that mankind may be "instinctively racist". If we cannot cure ourselves of that flaw in human nature, the outlook for the next century will be even grimmer than the experience of the century that is passing.

House guest

WITH customary sensitivity, the Oxford Union is to debate "This house believes that racism is inevitable". To lend intellectual force, John Tyndall, the chairman of the British National Party, will be among next month's speakers. From his illustrious party. Combat 18, a group that claimed responsibility for the Brixton bomb, reputedly sprang.

After last term's visit by Jerry

Springer, the Union has acquired a taste for tawdry headlines. Tyndall appeared on BBC TV recently supporting repatriation: my man with the clip-on bow-tie at the Union says: "We will be more sceptical than on the hustings of the Isle of Dogs. The university police have been informed."

CORONARY-INDUCING antics in Soho, where Damien Hirst, the ageing enfant. has taken to prancing around naked. Regulars at the Groucho are allowed to peruse an album of photos depicting Hirst sans attire. Michael Wojas, from the adjoining Colony Rooms, is weary: "When Damien has had a weary: "When Damien has had a few glasses next door, he runs in here and says, 'Michael, I'm going to take my clothes off.' He then parades around stark naked, shout-ing what do you think of my body?" I've seen it many times."

■ AFTER poetry became the new pop and gardening the new game, economics is to become the new erogenous zone. A young Cambridge don (above) has won a record six-figure advance from Random House for a new book, teasingly titled The Silent Takeover (which bangs on about how global business rules our lives).

Noreena Hertz, 31, promises to "make economics sexy". She has advised Boris Yeltsin on reform and helped Jordanian and Israeli ministers with the peace process. Literary types such as Ion Trewin agree that it is the largest book deal ever won by an economist.

A TV spin-off is being negotiated with guest stars Bill Gates and George Soros. "Business is going to be the new superpower," Dr Hertz pants, warming to the new lingo.

THE gun attack on Beryl Bainbridge by her mother-in-law is the stuff of legend, but now the author says she had been subjected to a second assault from her relative, this time with a knife: By this time I tell my children when Granny reaches into her handbag to give you sweeties, drop to the floor."

THAT fashionable Soho joint Dell'Ugo (proprietor: Antony Wor-rall Thompson) has just been graded "high risk" by environmental health inspectors at Westminster council. The restaurant, praised for its animal-loving ethos and frequented by Mo Mowlam, Jonathan Dimbleby and Downing Street sorts, was recently invaded by a giant shrew.
"I was strolling past when a shrew came flying out of the front door and a waiter scurried out after it." says a senior TV producer. The restaurant's manager responds: "We have gone through our routine inspection and there is no evidence of any rodent activity in the building." I'll stick to the Rioja.

POLITICOS in Brussels have a new threat: Jeremy Paxman's baby brother. Giles Paxo has been appointed Head of Chancery in the Brussels Embassy, putting him in charge of political relations between the two nations. "He's a lot cleverer than I am — and a lot smoother," Paxo Sr assures me. "He's more of a diplomat." Jeremy admits that he was rejected by the Diplomatic Corps: "I was wisely seen as unsuitable." Nonsense, he is just what the FO needs.

'Fifteen years ago there were no adverts and no products to advertise. A soft drink was a soft drink and there was only one word for it — water'

of corn, golden light and lots of old men vaguely modelled on Leo Tolstoy. This is the surreal image of Russia presented in television ads. Quite how anybody expects people who actually live here to believe that there are robust, rosy-cheeked girls in embroidered shirts happily slopping milk from one pail to the next in some pastoral idyll outside the ring road, t cannot imagine.

Fifteen years ago there was none of this drivel. No adverts, no products to advertise, no spin. Cheese was cheese (in fact there were two sorts - yellow and white), and a soft drink was a soft drink. There was only one word for it - water. Anything non-alcoholic came under this name. You knew where you were.

Then, in 1990, a billboard went up in Pushkin Square. It was huge. On it was a little line-drawing of a man holding a can.

The caption, a ludicrously literal quite as convinced as translation of the English, read: "7UP. More a jar of water than a way of life." People stood before it, squinting up in a desperate attempt to extract meaning. This was the start of advertising in Russia. For at least two years, direct translations of foreign advertisemenis baffled the Russian populace. "Bounty - the enjoyment of paradise" did not disclose that there was something to eat beyond the palm-tree wrapper and not a sex aid, as the words suggested. But eventually the economic colonists got the hang of things and started running faintly 1950s-style ads of the "buy this, it does this and is better than that" type. This went down much better and Russians began to believe that there were differences between cans of drink, and the ways of life that went with quite as convinced as their Western counterparts, perhaps — Rus-sians in general have a more finely developed sense of irony than we do - but they managed to have a Coke versus Pepsi war nonetheless.

Today, however, it's new ball game. While the nightmarish "Papa? Nicole!"

might not yet be appreciated, Western-style coffee ads are. Nowadays, the idea is 10 show affluent Russians enjoying the finer things in life. There is a fantastic one in which a girl lets a wairing lover leave messages asking where she is, as she enjoys her delicious cup of coffee in a faintly sexual way.

The thing is, where is she? She cannot be shown in some awful

Brezhnev high-rise, but the beautiful pre-Revolutionary apartments here are not yet fashionable because old people are still dying in them. So this gorgeous woman lives in a ground-floor place that overlooks a forest and is always bathed in golden light. If by some amazing chance such a place exists, she would need bars on the windows and an armed guard nearby. But best of all, there are now Russian companies running sophisticated ad campaigns. The trouble is, they have a Russian product to sell to Russians. This means that they cannot use beautiful Russian youngsters, looking Westernised and standing in a basketball court saying "I can chew it all day and it never loses its taste", because that is still selling the West to Russia. They have to sell Russia. The results are hilarious. This surreal twilight zone country has emerged - happy peasants in fields of gold meet affluent new Russians with cars and country houses. The most toe-curling of these involves a little boy on in-line skales, gliding along a pristine riverbank (no such thing around these parts and anyway. he would fall down a pothole in the pavement and do himself an injury), hand in hand with his Grandpa. I think the boy is wearing a Walkman around his neck and if not, he ought to be.

Grandpa has a long, grey beard and is wearing a belted peasant shirt and shoes made out of reeds. Presumably his son eschewed his simple way of life and became a contract killer or similar (in-line skates are expensive). Anyway, Grandpa is droning on about how the cathedrals are the heart of Russia (how he came out of Communism looking so well with such stringent religious beliefs is anyone's guess). The boy looks convinced.

The strangest, though, is Milaya Mila (sweet Lyudmilla), a pretty, buxom mother who goes oul into the pale morning light, skips through the dew to her healthy, happy cows and comes home with pails of fresh milk for her eager, early-rising family.

What is so interesting about all these ads is that, without exception, they carefully omit the past 75 years. It is as though Russia leapt straight from Tolstoyan paradise to American dream without a glitch. Would that were true - and perhaps, with a carton of milk, a stick of chewing gum and an aromatic cup of coffee, it just might be.

TIME FOR THE FRONTLASH

A new neo-Nazi threat based on old hatred

li is the result of fortune alone that no one has been killed in the two nail bomb anacks in London over the past ten days. Although the devices deployed in Brixton and now Brick Lane have been described as unsophisticated, the impact of such explosions at short range would be deadly. These assaults are designed to murder, maim and, above all, terrorise the neighbourhoods concerned. Whether they have been organised by Combat 18, the selfstyled "Command Council of the White Wolves", or a different extremist faction is immaterial: they obviously represent a direct threat from the far Right and are clearly racist in motivation. The objective is to frighten Asian-British and black-British communities.

This is a serious criminal development and one to which the Metropolitan Police have rightly offered the maximum possible attention and resources. It is important, however, to remember how small the neo-Nazi Right is in this country and how feeble its political prospects are. These are violent acts prosecuted by those with no chance of even a modest degree of power. To intimate otherwise is only likely to offer warped pleasure to those responsible.

There is no evidence that these attacks represent some sort of "backlash" to the Stephen Lawrence inquiry. This is sheer speculation that attempts to provide logical form for what is at root pure hatred. Organisations such as Combat 18 have been around in various forms for a number of decades. Their membership has never numbered more than a few hundred, most of whom spend relatively little time in their ranks. It is not clear that the Macpherson report has triggered any surge in their popularity. These attacks may instead be the result of other factors. The ultra-Right in Britain has been engaged in one of its frequent rounds of infighting. The partial introduction of proportional representation has persuaded parts of the British National Party that it should enter the electoral arena more vigorously and "broaden its appeal" in an implausible attempt to replicate the relative success of the French National Front. This has prompted a realignment and possible radicalisation of the remaining strongly racist sector. The American militias have set an example for some of these individuals to follow. The Internet might have provided another means of disseminating information on the construction of crude devices.

The Metropolitan Police have an opportunity not only to arrest those concerned but also lift their standing in the eyes of ethnic minorities. The Macpherson report portrayed a police force seemingly unwilling to recognise a distinct category of racist crime. The reaction of the police over the past week has shown an enormous improvement on past insensitivity. Deputy Assistant Commissioner Alan Fry has dealt with these incidents in a direct manner and adopted a tone that conveys an appropriate sense of urgency. He deserves the widest possible co-operation from the public.

The nail bomb assailants wish not only to sow fear among minority communities but to drive a wedge between them and white residents. The best possible response is not only their swift arrest but an investigation that brings together people of different colours. An increase in the esteem in which the Metropolitan Police are held would be an obviously unintended but extremely welcome consequence of the current bombing campaign. There is not a white "backlash" either to the Lawrence report or to any other aspect of race relations in Britain - although the ultra-Right would love to foment one. As Lyndon Johnson once said, it is time for the "frontlash" to materialise.

WOOLF AT THE DOOR

A legal revolution today that will take some time to judge

Great expectations await the reforms to civil litigation that come into effect today. These changes are based on the recommendations made by Lord Woolf, Master of the Rolls, in 1996. Then they were hailed as the solution to the protracted and expensive court process which has needed a lawyer at every twist and turn. The Lord Chancellor, Lord Irvine of Lairg, has continued this crusade, presenting these reforms as a key part of his broader campaign that includes the controversial access to Justice Bill, in protest against which the Law Society has today taken out advertisements in the national press.

The expectations that the long-awaited Woolf reforms will transform civil justice into a quick and cost-effective remedy for disputes, accessible to all, are about to be put to the test. The principal theme is that of keeping as much litigation as possible out of the courts by encouraging alternative, or early, resolution of disputes. If the reforms succeed in this, then the costs and time spent in litigation will fall.

The chances of such success lie mainly in the hands of the judiciary. Judges have taken over the responsibility for moving litigation forward, replacing the lawyers acting in the case who were seen to have an interest in prolonging litigation in order to earn more fees. With this responsibility have come new powers to impose stiff penalties on those who prolong disputes. If judges use these powers effectively, litigants will find that fighting to the bitter end does not pay. This will not happen overnight. These reforms are overhauling civil legal procedure and turning litigation on its head. Litigators will now be operating in new and unfamiliar territory. Under the new regime of disclosing facts and arguments in advance, the tactics of trial by ambush will be relegated to the past. At the same time, the traditional lawyers' hammer and tongs of procedural rules - studied and practised for years - have been replaced with an entirely new set of instruments. Everybody will be a beginner, and lawyers will be treading cautiously at first, inquiring over every point, and possibly making court hearings themselves even slower than before.

The lawyers' complaint is that these The legal professions are notoriously reluctant to change their ways. The Bar has been stalling for years over opening up its monopolistic restrictions on who can appear in court. Cynics might view the Law Society's latest attack on the cost-cutting Access to Justice Bill as an attempt to preserve its members' livelihoods.

There is, however, some justification for their protests. The Lord Chancellor has been hurrying his law reforms through Parliament. The Access to Justice Bill was presented to Parliament without the nuts and bolts of how its changes will actually work. Similarly, although Lord Woolf said that his reforms depended on the use of new administrative technology, this will not be in place for another year - seriously jeopardising judges' ability to process their new workload.

Transitional difficulties are, however, inherent to all programmes of change. It would be wrong to judge the effectiveness of these reforms on what may be a sticky start. Nor should the wrinkles and irregularities which will inevitably be found in the new procedure be taken as a sign that it does not work. Every system has its own set of problems. What counts is whether, in the long run, the speed and cost at which people can solve their legal problems improve.

The cheesemakers smell a Whitehall plot

Cheese and bureaucracy do not mix. As we report today, specialist cheesemakers fear that overpowering bureaucracy might force them out of business as quickly as over-ripe Camembert provokes exit from the larder. The plight of these small businessmen highlights the dilemma politicians face. At the whiff of a food scare ministers are quick to promise new regulations to lessen the risks of picking up a knife and fork. The result can be bankruptcy for producers, less choice for consumer and, in this case, the death of the runny cheese and the supremacy of the rubbery one. Only a few weeks ago, the Government was praising the British cheese industry's products, describing them as "some of the finest of the world". Such plaudits are deserved. Britain's cheeseboard reflects the variety of the countryside, speckled with blues and reds, some smoked, others full fat, oozing with flavour. Yet if the proposed new dairy hygiene rules are implemented, like a green field smothered by a motorway, this rolling calorific delight might disappear under the uniform monotony of slabs of processed cheese. Forcing small producers to send every batch of produce for microbiological testing, for instance, could make creating their delights unprofitable. The difference

Whitehall secret agenda, fearing that the regulations will mature into a ban on unpasteurised milk being used to make dairy produce. They argue that runny cheeses, made with untreated milk, cannot be made without bacteria, the enemy of the risk-conscious. Yet far from being beastly bacteria, these are on the side of the angels, fighting off listeria and making the cheese safe to eat. So forcing all producers to heat unique creamy qualities. Ministers would be guilty of gastronomic vandalism if they allowed their quest for between what ministers are saying and planning is, it appears, chalk and cheese. The cheesemakers smell the whiff of a milk to 72C - pasteurisation - might be counter-productive, destroying the cheese's natural defence mechanism and its smelly.

food safety to destroy the variety of the cheeseboard. Flagrant abuses of hygiene regulations should carry a penalty, but do not warrant a wholesale change in those regulations. Eating cheese is a risky business, but so is crossing the road or having a bath. In 1996, 34 people aged between 15 and 64 died from food poisoning, six of whom had listeria, while 83 people died by falling off a chair or out of bed. Politicians should remember the principle of "caveat emptor". Most shoppers, like good Cheddars, are mature.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

From Professor 1. R. Scott

Sir. On April 26, the Civil Procedure Rules 1998, implementing the reforms to the administration of justice recom-mended by Lord Woolf, come into force. Doubtless, the Lord Chancellor's publicity machine will be putting out a considerable amount of information extolling the virtues of the new system and emphasising in particular that it will provide faster and cheap-

t doubt whether one will find any hint that the implementation of the new scheme is turning out to be a

It has been asserted that the Civil Procedure Rules (CPR) constitute a "new procedural code", written in plain English and that they will be readily understood by lawyer and lay-person alike. The truth is that, in many respects, the rules and their supplementing practice directions are an impenetrable mess.

Errors abound. Additions and changes have been made from week to week as "Woolf day" approached. Many appear to be very important. I say "appear to be" because some of the material put out recently is incomprehensible. Indeed, the further supplementing Practice Direction to Part 8 of the CPR (produced during the first week of this month) is one of the worst examples of procedural drafting I have seen.

As a result of the mismanaged implementation of the new scheme, judges, lawyers, court staff and litigants in person have been placed in an impossible posidon and recrimina-tions are likely to be fierce. The civil justice system faces a long period of "muddling through", during which much time, effort and money will be spent on trying to operate and manage a procedural system that ought to have been got right well in advance of Woolf day.

Yours faithfully, 1. R. SCOTT, Faculty of Law, University of Birmingham, Birmingham B15 2TT. scottir@lawbham.ac.uk April 23.

From Dr Alan B. Shrank

Sir, Why do politicians pursue policies abandoned by those who have introduced them in the past? In trying to force performance-related pay on teachers (letters, April 12 and 19), why have they ignored commerce's disenchantment with this policy?

Those who work harder than their colleagues do not do so to receive the incentive, nor do they work harder once it is received. Some not recognised as worthy of extra reward become disillusioned and work less. Overall, the total effort is reduced. Most big enterprises have discovered this and abandoned the policy.

Performance-related pay occupies the valuable time of assessors. Favouritism and blackballing can influence decisions. Ill-feeling is engendered and damages team spirit. In teaching, team spirit is particularly important. since the quality of the school or college depends on the combined efforts of teachers in different subjects and at different levels. To select one or more teachers is invidious.

The key to rewarding workers is to pay them all an attractive salary. This results in higher-quality personnel and a high-quality service. Yours sincerely.

ALAN B. SHRANK (Vice-President, Hospital Consultants and Specialists Association), 20 Crescent Place, Town Walls, Shrewsbury SYI ITQ. April 20.

From Mrs Ruth Hazeldine

Sir. The letter from the Chairman of Council of the Stroke Association and others (April 15) makes an eloquent plea for better provision for stroke patients within the health service. They write as academics and health professionals, while I write as the daughter and granddaughter of victims of stroke.

Anyone who has witnessed the suffering of a stroke victim, and experienced the harrowing sense of helplessness felt by relatives, friends and carers, would support this plea for stroke units to be included in the national priorities guidelines.

Yours sincerely, RUTH HAZELDINE. 52 Jacksons Lane, N6 5SX. April 16.

Risk of a Balkan wasteland

From Mr George Thomas

Sir. There is not the least fig of legality to our assault on Yugoslavia (John Laughland's article, April 22). We seem simply to have declared that what we decide is right is right and is the law whether or not the UN or anyone else agrees, and that those countries that do not observe our law must expect to be punished. This century has produced several infamous leaders who thought like that.

At least we should have observed one other law, which is that if you do break the rules because of a "greater good" then you had better be sure some great good comes of it. So far our interference has been a disaster and it might seem the situation could not be worse. But, for once, do we not have a duty to think this through? Will reducing Serbia, outrageous though its behaviour has been, into yet another Balkan wasteland really create a better situation than the one we have today?

Yours faithfully, GEORGE THOMAS, 17 Campden Hill Square, W8 7JY.

From the Director of the Atlantic Council of the United Kingdom

Sir, I do not dispute in any way the rights of Alice Mahon (report and letter, April 21) to exercise her conscience in an independent way as a Labour MP. I do know from personal experience from a visit 1 made to South Vietnam as a Member of Parliament in 1968 that anything you wrote — as I did for the press — exercising an independent judgment. was nevertheless used unscrupulously by both the South Vietnamese Government and Ho Chi Minh

Although heavily criticised by some members of the Parliamentary Labour Party, f did not regret my visit. A number of newspapers at the time were interested in sponsoring my visit, which I refused. On arrival in Saigon, the South Vietnamese Government arranged my hotel; however, after a short period of time I moved and stayed with the British charge d'affaires.

I think Alice Mahon made an error of judgment in accepting an invitation to visit Belgrade — including financial backing from a newspaper — when she might have known that her visit would have the effect of strengthening the Belgrade regime's propaganda.

I agree with her that the British public has the right to know the effect of the Nato bombings on the Serbian people living so far below the poverty line in South Africa that they do not even show up on the national register. In addition, I believe, they have been systematically terrorised by the authorities for decades.

When Western poliocians talk about the need for jobs and housing it is a standard pre-election promise.

When South Airican poliocians talk about the same thing it is a matter of national security. What South Africa needs now is not a better police force but a humanitarian aid mission on a massive scale.

From Mr Edwin Roth

Sir, Clare Short is totally correct and justified in likening certain Labour MPs to those Britons who wanted to appease Hitler in the Thirties (report. April 21).

As a foreign correspondent, f was vorking in Israel during the Bosnian War when a demonstration against Milosevic's ethnic cleansing of Muslims was held in an Arab town there. To everybody's surprise, one participant was Professor Shevach Weiss, then the Speaker of Israel's parlia-ment, an Orthodox Jew. "I came to this Muslim demonstration because 1 am an expert on ethnic cleansing." he said. "I am the only survivor of my family. All the others were ethnically cleansed by Hitler in Auschwitz."

Yours sincerely, EDWIN ROTH, 20 Arkwright Mansions, Finchley Road, NW3 6DE. April 22

From Mr R. Luta

Sir. The President and the four Vice-Presidents of the English Centre of International PEN wrote that: Before Nato bombs began to fall, there was an active and vocal opposition to the tyrannical regime of Slobodan Milosevic with its vile policy of slaughter and ethnic cleansing of the Kosovo Albanians" (letter, April 20).

I was appalled to read this from people who lead such an institution. If this is not spin, or pro-Serb propaganda, it is ignorance at best. I come from Kosova, and by God, I wish I knew there had ever been a gathering of at least a few Serbs in Belgrade to express any kind of opposition to what the Milosevic regime was doing to the Albanians

l would kindly ask Ms Billington and the signatories of the letter to send me any information to substan-tiate such a claim, if they have any.

Sincerely yours, r luta 120 Merton Mansions, Bushey Road, Raynes Park, SW20 8DG. ragip@luta.freeserve.co.uk

From Sir Paul Fox

Sir, It is inconceivable that the BBC would have asked me to return as Managing Director, BBC Television.

Dyke 'disqualified' had I, during my time at Yorkshire Television, made any financial contributions to a political party.

A decade on, nothing has changed. The BBC decided that Melvyn Bragg. one of our most gifted broadcasters, could not continue to host Start the Week on Radio 4 because of his well-known links with Tony Blair (report, July 8, 1998).

Although Greg Dyke is a charismatic and talented figure in television, he has disqualified himself from being a serious candidate for the job of Director-General and Editor-in-Chief of the BBC (leading article. April 23; letters, April 20, 21 and 23). The fact that his financial contributions to Labour are widely known and that he would somehow "balance" Sir Christopher Bland, the Chairman and one-time GLC Conservative councillor, is irrelevant. Even in 1999, the BBC cannot bend the rules.

Yours sincerely, PAUL FOX (Controller, BBC1, 1967-73; Managing Director, BBC Television, 1988-91), c/o 10 Charterhouse Square, London, ECIM 6LQ.

Digital TV

From the Chief Executive of Channel 5

Sir, The leaders of commercial television who wrote to you [April 21] deploring the prospect of a digital supplement to the licence fee seem prepared to sacrifice the long-term public interest in the welfare of the BBC for their own short-term economic ends. They all have a substantial stake in the success of digital television, but seem unwilling to acknowledge the important and growing role the BBC plays in ensuring the public appeal of digital offerings.

We are told that the BBC is investing 10 per cent of the licence fee £200 million per annum — in digital infrastructure and services. The BBC's own free-to-air services (News24, Choice, Learning and Parliament), together with joint ventures such as UK Horizons and new, online offerings, will play a significant part in attracting digital customers. Do the signatories to the letter expect these services to be provided indefinitely at the expense of all licence-fee payers for the benefit of the digital minority

(and, of course, themselves)? There are precedents for the proposed supplement. Television was originally funded by a separate licence fee, over and above radio. Colour television was introduced in 1967 and a supplementary licence fee for colour the following year. It would be hard to argue that it inhibited the spread of colour: the extra investment by the BBC in new programming helped colour licences to outstrip black-and-white ones within eight

The signatories display little confidence in their own offering, liole understanding of the past and little sympathy for the long-term role of the BBC in the digital age in suggesting that a £2.50 a month charge to fund the BBC's inidatives would seriously inhibit the transfer to digital.

There can be a serious debate about the scale and nature of the BBC's digital investment. However, to imagine that, for ever and a day, the BBC will be funded by a single, undifferentiated, flat-rate lump sum per household for all the services it offers would be to inhibit the BBC, the transfer to digital and (though they may not realise it) the businesses of the signatories themselves. Yours faithfully. DAVID ELSTEIN. Chief Execuove, Channel 5 Broadcasting Ltd, 22 Long Acre, WC2E 9LY. April 21.

OBITUARIES

ARTHUR BOYD

Arthur Boyd, AC, OBE, artist, died in Melbourne on April 24 aged 78. He was boro on July 24, 1920.

has been said that, after Picasso Arthur Boyd's oeuvre is the most massive and varied in the history o 20th-century painting. His chie theme was the divine frenzy of love. If recognition of his artisoc stature was slow in Europe despite his huge output, it was partly because he painted pictures with subject matter when abstraction was in the ascendant, and partly because his combination of quiet modesty, acute intelligence and passionate art was not for the salon or cocktail party. He lived compactly in the satisfying circle of an artistic family, and yet he travelled constantly. He was a rare 20th-century visionary who dealt with great themes. both personal and public, without ever losing his sense of place.

Arthur Merric Bloomfield Boyd was born in Murrumbeena, then just outside Melbourne, to a family which had emigrated from Britain in the early 19th century, and which has now produced four generations of artists, writers and musicians. His father, Merric, was one of Australia's first studio potters. His mother, a painter and Christian Scientist, provided an artistic and religious upbringing for her five children, who all became painters, sculptors or potters.

Boyd left primary school at 14 to work in a paint factory owned by an uncle, and briefly attended evening classes in art at the National Gallery of Victoria. In 1936, while living with his grandfather, himself a painter, he began to paint landscapes, well enough to have his first exhibition at 17. These were mainly broadly painted Impressionist views in grey-blues and othres, but there was already a boldness of attack which was soon to become more Expressionist.

During the 1940s, some of the most urgent, passionate, imaginative and humane art anywhere in the world was being painted in Melbourne, Australia. It was as if only at the furthest distance from the bloodshed in Europe could the world's agonies be handled. The year 1937 had been crucial. In that year, Joel Bergner, a 17-year-old European Jew who had lived in the Warsaw ghetto and who painted in a style influenced by Picasso's Blue Period, arrived in Australia as a refugee. The Russian Cossack Danila Vassilieff, who had fought in the First World War. reached Melbourne by way of the Black Sea. India, China, Queensland, then Brazil, the West Indies, England, France, and Spain; the self-taught Albert Tucker was picking up his own style of Expressionism: Noel Counihan was painting urban scenes with a strong social content. and John Perceval was painting psychological dramas.

Arthur Boyd in Hampstead in 1967, at work on the last of 35 large pictures about King Nebuchadnezzar, for the Adelaide Arts Festival attention.

All these men, along with Boyd, came. together to produce what has become known as the "Angry Decade", 1937-47, throwing the agonies of a suffering world at an Australian society that was still trying to remain isolationist.

Boyd joined the Australian Army Service Corps in 1939, working in Melbourne and Bendigo as a cartographic field surveyor until 1944, but managed to participate in the exhibitions of the Contemporary Art Society from 1942 to 1946. Meanwhile he was developing a personal style, combining Surrealism, symbolism, social realism and Expressionism to create a world of lovers and cripples, beasts and monsters, in scenes of suffering, passionate love and redemption.
After leaving the Army he married

Yvonne Lennie, a former art student, in 1945, and set up a pottery business with his sister's husband, the painter John Per-ceval. In the same year the Myer Gallery requested the removal of one of Boyd's pictures, Two Lovers: The Good Shepherd, from the Contemporary Art Society Exhibition on grounds of obscenity.

He now began a profound study of the art of Bosch, Breughel and Rembrandt, including not only their subject matter and composition but also the technical beauties of their paintwork. With tempera and oil, sometimes over chalk grounds, and with an abundance of precise detail and mellow radiance of colour, he painted The Mockers and The Mourners in 1945, and in 1946-47 produced a tour de force of Breughelian and Bosch-like breadth, The Mining Town.

Less tendentious than his paintings of religious themes, sexual passion, guilt and betrayal were his Berwick and Wimmera landscapes of 1948-49, which won him the respect of Australia's cultural establishment. A series of murals for his uncle, the novelist Martin Boyd, were followed in 1950 by work on ceramic tiles, and sculpture such as Saul and David of 1953.

In 1951 Boyd travelled to Central

Australia, where the poverty and dereliction of the Aboriginal people of the interior corresponded to the maimed and deprived creatures who already peopled his psychodramas of the redemptive powers of love. The trip had a strong impression on Boyd, as he showed in a series of paintings from 1956 entitled Love. Marriage and Death of a Half-Caste (often known as the Bride series). These Chagall-like allegories feature a part-Aboriginal stockman, who is joined by a naked, spectral bride in a forest clearing. The first cycle of paintings on this theme was shown at the Australian Galleries in 1959, and filmed by Patrick Ryan and Tim Burstall, bringing Boyd to international

After taking part in the Antipodean Exhibition that year, Boyd left for London with his family. They rented a house in Hampstead Lane as a base for touring Europe, and the next year, 1960 - the year that Sidney Nolan exhibited his Leda and the Swan series at the Mattiesen

Gallery - Boyd had his first London show, at the Zwemmer Gallery. The catalogue had a foreword by Bryan Robertson, who was to advance Boyd's reputation with his exhibition of Recent Australian Painting at the Whitechapel Gallery in 1961, and a full retrospective of Boyd's work at the same influencial address in 1962.

Boyd next conquered the theatre, A commission for decor and costumes for Stravinsky's ballet Renard at the Edinburgh Festival and later at Sadler's Wells was followed in 1963 by stage designs for the ballet Electra, with music by Malcolm Arnold and choreography by Robert Helpmann, at Covent Garden and later at the Met in New York.

Like his close friend Sidney Nolan, with whom he was often linked, Boyd found Europe a great stimulus. The feeling of distance which had launched the "Angry Decade" in Australia was for a time reversed, and Boyd vigorously pursued his Australian themes in Britain.

LORD KILLANIN

Then, after several years devoted to the Half-Caste cycle, his erooc fantasies of star-crossed, wind-blown lovers — as if in some underworld of the shades from Virgil or Dante — took on the myths and metamorphoses of anoquity and the Renaissance. In 1966 he began the Nebuchadnezzar series; in 1968 he made lithographs on the theme of St Francis of Assisi, and a collection of tapestries and pastels on the same theme followed.

During the 1970s he published etchings, lithographs and aquatints on Lysistrata and Narcissus, and worked on tapestries of Nebuchadnezzar. He also illustrated Peter Porter's Jonah (1973) and The Lady and the Unicorn (1975), and Janet Dalley's translations of Pushkin's

Il these works were punctuated by exhibitions at Fischer Fine Art in London, and long and frequent visits to Australia for an increasing number of exhibitions. In 1973 Boyd bought an estate on the Shoalhaven River, where he founded an expanding family enclave. and which became the inspiration for many subsequent sketches and painongs. In Europe, Boyd's base from 1975 was Ramsholt, near Woodbridge in Suffolk, and he also acquired a house near Palaio in Tuscany. Although he loved to travel, he was terrified of flying, and always insisted on going by ship.

Responses to the landscape and natural events around Shoalhaven took more of Boyd's attendon in the 1980s, when he acquired another house on the Shoalhaven River, at Bundanon, near Nowra, New South Wales. In 1984 he received a commission for a tapestry for the Parliament House Authority in Canberra, and another to paint 16 canvases for the fover of the State Theatre at the Victoria Arts Centre, Melbourne,

Meanwhile, his paintings were growing larger, fiercer in colour and broader in their references to contemporary society. This meant that an artist who had long swum against the tide of fashion found himself right at the centre of the younger New Expressionists in the 1980s.

In 1993 Boyd and Sir Sidney Nolan (his brother-in-law since 1976) gave their extensive properties at Bundanon to the Australian public for the creacon of a national arts and environment centre. The landscape, including Pulpit Rock, features in many of Boyd's late painings, and the trust provides places for artists in residence. It is also developing exchange programmes, especially between England, Asia and Australia.

Arthur Boyd was appointed OBE in 1970, AO in 1979 and AC in 1992. He was voted Australian of the Year in 1995.

He is survived by his wife, and by their son and two daughters, all three of whom

SIR JAMES COBBAN

Sir James Cobhan, CBE, Abingdon School, died on April 19 aged 88. He was born on September 14, 1910.

JAMES COBBAN was one of the last of a generation of headmasters who devoted most of their working lives to a single school. Having learnt much about leadership and administration during the war, he also made a wide contribution to public life. Born in Scunthorpe, James

Macdonald Cobban won a scholarship from Pocklington School to Jesus College, Cambridge, where he took a first in both parts of the Classical Tripos (with the highest mark except for his contemporary. Enoch Powell) and was both Thirwall Medallist and Gladstone Prizeman. He taught at King Edward

VI School, Southampton, and at Dulwich College before serving in the Directorate of Military Intelligence and becoming, as a Lieutenant-Colonel, a Staff Officer with the Control Commission in Germany. After the war he returned briefly to Dulwich, before becoming headmaster of Abingdon, then an undisonguished school of 250 pupils, in 1947. By the ome "The Boss" retired in 1970, it had more than 700 pupils.

Referred to by one general as the best staff officer he had ever had, Cobban arrived at Abingdon with something of a reputation as an administrator. It was said that the filing system he introduced to the school was based on what he had observed of German military efficiency. Under him, the area of the school's buildings doubled, and when the quatercentenary was celebrated in 1963, Abingdon had become one of the major direct grant schools in the country. He needed little sleep, and his energy and ideas never flagged. He remained in the forefront of curriculum development, with innovations in maths, science, classics and music. And he understood the claim to greater freedom among pupils in the Valley Police Authority.

He represented the Diocese

Lieutenant of Berkshire in 1966 and, under reorganisation, of Oxfordshire in 1974. He was appointed CBE in 1971 and knighted in 1982. In 1986 a party was held to celebrate 50 years of continuous publicaoon of his Latin reader Civis Romanus, which he wrote with a colleague at Dulwich and which had sold nearly half a million copies (paying for the education of four daughters). The two authors and the original commissioning editor were all present. He married Lorna Marlow in 1942, but she died in 1961, and their only son also died when very young. His sister gave up her job as a primary school headmistress to support him at Abingdon. He is survived by her and his four daughters.

He worked on many committees, was a director of several companies, and produced a number of films with John Ford. For many years he was president of the Irish Club in London, and he also helped to promote the Dublin Festival Theatre. He also found time to write. His book on Godfrey Kneller, while not a scholarly contribution, served to revive interest in a figure overshadowed by his contemporaries Gainsborough and Reynolds. Killanin also collaborated with Michael Duignan on The Shell Guide to Ireland

As an Olympic administrator he displayed considerable diplomatic gifts. He was president of the Irish Olympic Council from 1950, and a member of the IOC from 1952. In 1966 he became chief of protocol, and two years later he rose to be vice-president. He stood for a modern, flexible approach (not least on amateur status) and his patrician background helped him to push through reforms. His philosophy was to put the competitor first and to ensure that the Games were open to the maximum possible number of athletes. What he really wanted was a reduction of nationalism in the Games, and he was for a long time a which he finally achieved. It had been thought that Killanin's predecessor as President of the IOC, Avery Brundage, who held office for 20 years, had had a difficult ome. but Killanin's experience, though spanning only eight years, was even more trying. He hardly had time to savour his election to the presidency at Munich in 1972 before the Games there were marred by the tragedy that overtook the Israeli team at the hands of the Palestinian guerrillas - an early reminder of his unnerving responsibiliões.

was also a consistent advocate of the admission of China,

Later that year a crisis arose over the 1976 Winter Olympics. when Denver, the city originally chosen, withdrew. This was unprecedented and could have presented the new President with an insoluble problem had the Austrians not come to the rescue with an offer to hold the Games again at Innsbruck, where the 1964 Winter Olympics had been held.

Nevertheless, 1976 was a severe trial because little went right for the Montreal Games that summer, Industrial acoon left the preparations seri-ously behind schedule and created doubts about whether the city could be ready in ome. in the end all was well so far as the facilides were concerned, but two poliocal develcoments offered new threats. Late in the day, the Canadian Government refused to accept ciozens of Taiwan under the official Olympic name of the Republic of China, in conformity with United Nacons transfer of recognition to Beijing. The Taiwanese were supported by the US, which at one time threatened to withdraw. Neither side would yield, and the Games went ahead without them. The US did not go through with its boycott, but an even bigger one took effect. Many African naoons and their sympathisers packed their bags and left as a protest at the admission of New Zealand who had incurred displeasure by sharing a rugby tour with South

ieved one cherished ambicions, when a formula was found for the readmission of China to the Olympic movement. Beijing dropped its precondition that it would rejoin only if Taiwan were excluded as a separate enoty. based on the argument that Taiwan was a part of China and that its ciozens should compete under the mainland flag. The IOC decided to recognise two separate Chinese Olympic Committees. But Taipei remained hostile to this new arrangement and stubbornly sent a team to Lake Placid in the name of the Republic of China rather than the new title wished upon it, that of the Chinese Taipei National Olympic Committee. When its team was refused admission to the Olympic Village, Taiwan successfully sought court approval for the ruling to be overturned.

Lake Placid duly lodged an appeal, supported by the US, which claimed that if the judgment were allowed to stand, the American position in internacional sport would be compromised. The Americans' attitude at Lake Placid had changed diametrically from that at Montreal.

But all this paled beside the problems presented by Moscow in the summer of 1980. There had been criocism of the decision in 1974 to award the Games to the Soviet capital. Indignation overflowed into anger when the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan at the end of 1979. Personal indignaoon was supplanted by presidential hostility in America and expressions of severe disapproval elsewhere, notably in Britain and Australia. President Carter's efforts to prevent an American team from competing in Moscow were successful, but Margaret Thatcher's attempt to keep Britain in step were a failure. with the exception of a few sports of Conservaove flavour. In all more than 80 of the 150 or so nations in the Olympic movement competed in Moscow. Of the remainder, about 40 supported the boycott and others stayed away for other reasons.

Killanin had averted the worst, and realised his ambioon of bringing China back into the Games, as well as improving the IOC finances, but his touching faith in the power of sport to promote peace was, in the end, disappointed. His memoirs, My Olympic Years, were particularly critical of Jimmy Carter.

He is survived by his wife. three sons and a daughter.

BRITISH GRIP ON HILL 60

During the last few days the area south-east of Ypres has cononued to be the centre of interest, and the narrative of the fighting there will be given up to the night of Wednesday, the 21st. Hill 60, of which the Germans held the crest, was seamed with innumerable trenches and saps. At 7pm on April 17 seven mines were fired simultaneously under the German trenches. The interval that elapsed before our assault took place was - to use the words of one soldier - "like a transformation scene." Trenches, parapets, sandbags disappeared and the whole surface of the ground assumed strange shapes - here torn into huge craters, there forming mounds of fallen debris.

As the reports of explosions died away. and while the dense columns of smoke and dust still hung in the air, our men. led by their officers, sprang from the trenches and rushed across the intervening space of some 40 to 60 yards between our line and the gaping craters before them, the front covered by the attack being only some 250 yards in leogth.

Many of the German soldiers were surprised in their shirt sleeves. Stunned by the explosions, suddenly subjected to a rain of hand-grenades, thrown by our bombing parties, they gave way to panic. Cursing and shouting, they were falling over one another and fighting in their hurry to gain the exits into the maintained far into the night.

communication trenches, and some of those in rear, maddened by terror, were driving their bayonets into the bodies of their comrades in front. Of all this our infantry had but a momentary glimpse before they fell upon the enemy with the bayonet, burst through the maze of trenches, poured into the craters, and pressed on down the communication trenches until at last they were stopped by barricades defended by bomb throwers. The first line of trenches over the front assaulted was captured in a few minutes, with little difficulty, and 15 prisoners fell into our hands. But it was then that the real struggle began, for the Germans quickly recovered from their surprise.

recent weeks from the players of Manchester United about the importance of sending messages to their rivals with emphatic performances, messages of invulnerability that gradually drain the opposition of all hope. As he stood in one of the wide corridors at the Riverside Stadium early on Satur-day evening, Arsene Wenger, the Arsenal manager, smiled when he was reminded of what they had been saying.

His side had just subjected Middlesbrough to a humiliating rout. In the process, they had leapt to the top of the FA Carling Premiership for the first time this season. Wenger could afford 10 feel pleased with himself. Three points is the best message you can

Going by that criterion, United suffered a rare breakdown in communications yesterday. Their failure to beat a spirited, skilful Leeds United side at Elland Road was not a bad result, but, taken together with the sheer brilliance of Arsenal's 6-1 demolition of Middlesbrough, it seemed to throw the championship race wide open again.

United trail the champions by a point and even though

THERE has been much talk in their fate is still in their control because they have a game in hand, even though they are still the bookmakers' favourites, Arsenal will hold the psychological advantage of being top for the next five days at least. In United's favour, they will not face opponents of Leeds's calibre again, while Ar-senal still have to play O'Leary's side and endure the lottery of a North London derby at White Hart Lane.

If Chelsea had won yesterday afternoon, rather than trudging to a dull goalless draw away to Sheffield Wednesday, they might have re-entered the race. Now, though, they have retreated even further into the shadows.

"There are still a lot of twists and turns to come," Ferguson said after he had seen Dwight Yorke spurn a late chance to beat Leeds, "but this is a good result for Arsenal and Chelsea. It will have given them much more hope. It will go right down to the wire now."

The way that Arsenal played on Saturday suggests that Ferguson might be right. They were irresistible. Kanu, their Nigeria forward, was so inspired that it will be hard to leave him out, even for Dennis Bergkamp. One of his goals.

Slow on the draw: Ferguson ponders Manchester United's failure to retake the Premiership lead at Elland Road yesterday an outrageously extravagant back-heel from 12 yards, almost defied belief. His poise and positional awareness have brought yet another dimension to an Arsenal attack that was not exactly short of weapons in the first place.

In defence, the champions were as relentlessly parsimoni-ous as ever. Steve Bould, depu-tising for the suspended Martin Keown, produced a fault-less display that underlined the standards that Keown and Tony Adams have to set in order to keep him on the bench. Even at 35, Bould would be a starting member of any other side in the country.

Fifa brought to book_33 rivals from Yorkshire yesterday, they also finished the game with an epidemic of injuries that does not bode well for their ability to cope with the demands of a punishing championship run-in.

In the aftermath of the i-i draw, secured when Andy Cole scored a second-half equaliser (o rub out Jimmy Floyd Hasselbaink's goal for Leeds, Ferguson orchestrated a mass withdrawal of his players from international duty.

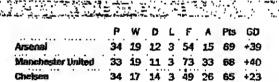

Paul Scholes and Andy Cole were pulled out of the England squad that travels to Hungary today, Jaap Stam, whose Achilles tendon injury is causing concern, will not join up with Holland and neither Ronny Johnsen nor Henning Berg will be part of Norway's plans. Add to that the fact that Ryan Giggs may miss the rest of the season with an ankle injury and the scale of the problem is obvious.

"We did well in some respects today," Ferguson said. 'Our passing was chaotic at times and in the first 20 minutes we were very lackadaisical, but, considering the exertions of the last two weeks, that is understandable." Ferguson is not the kind to need any reassurance, but David O'Leary, the Leeds manager, offered some anyway. "I have said I think United will win the title all along," he said, "and I will stay with them now. I thought Arsenal would beat Middlesbrough, so that doesn't really change any thing. But one thing is for sure: they will push United all

GOLF: WAYWARD TEE SHOT COSTS FURIOUS BRITON £43,450 IN THE FINAL ROUND OF SPANISH OPEN

IN BARCELONA

ANOTHER day, another row. The Peugeot Spanish Open has been dogged by controversies and it was not done with them in the final round yesterday as Jamie Spence had a ruling imposed on him that cost him. at the very least, the chance to finish second in the tournament. It also cost him the small matter of £43,450 and Spence was not happy about it.

Spence, 35, was the closest challenger to Jarmo Sandelin, the eventual winner, when he hooked his drive 20 yards to the left of the par-five 12th fairway at El Prat. He and Janet Squire, his caddie, were adamant that they saw the hall roll under an improperly parked car, but, when they got to the spot. The ball could not be found.

Paul Carrigill, a European Tour rules official, was summoned and, after consulting John Paramor, the Tour's chief referee, ruled that as there was not sufficient evidence as to the location of the ball. Spence would have to . declare it lost, return to the tee and drive again under a two-stroke penalty.

The result was a double-bogey seven and Spence finished in a tie for fifth place on 16 under par. Had the penalty not been imposed and his round had finished as it did. he would have ended the tournament on 18 under. His prize would have been £66,650 - as it was, he had to be content with £23,200.

Spence was furious. "No question about it, the ball was picked up by somebody. Nothing else could have happened to it," he said. "If there had been a marshal there, as there had been all week, the cars would not have been parked there in the first place. It was ridiculous,"

Paramor was apologetic. "We tried to block cars off from parking there, but a few got through," he said.

Sandelin salutes the crowd after sinking the final putt that sealed his victory in the Spanish Open yesterday. Photograph: Albert Olive

This is not the first time that Spence has been hit by a contested ruling. He thought that he was taking a three-shot lead into the final round of the Roma Masters at Castelgandolfo in 1993, but was disqualified overnight for taking an incorrect drop when it transpired that he had moved his ball 15 yards instead of 13 from an area of ground under

Spence could not but remember that incident as he looked back on his misfortune and his reaction included a reference to Severiano Ballesteros's controversial drop in the first round of this tournament that was as transparent as a wet Tshirt. "To think, I was disqualified in 1993 for dropping my ball two yards out of position."

he said, "and yet there has been somebody here this week who dropped his ball eight yards away from where they should have done and was allowed to play on. The rules of golf are very hard and very unfair at times, but what can you do but accept it?"

Spence's misfortune meant a hefty bonus for Ignacio Garrido, Miguel Angel Jimenez, both of Spain, and Paul McGinley, of Ireland, who shared second place, but did not make a jot of difference to Sandelin. The tall, rangy Swede, 32, went into the last round with a three-stroke lead and the gap was never closer than that at any time in the day as he completed a closing round of 69 to win by four. His triumph on 267, 21 under par, which won him £100,000 and pushed him into fifth place in the Ryder Cup standings, was his third on the European Tour, but was the most precious by far.

His mother, Sinikka, died two months ago and in a tearful and poignant moment during his press conference, he dedicated his win to her -"and the next, and the next after that". At times like this, things like incorrect drops yes, and even £43,000 - can seem awfully insignificant.

O'Sullivan lifts his game to retain initiative

By PHIL YATES

A CRUEL slice of fortune. lapses in concentration and a detérmined opponent could not prevent Ronnie O'Sullivan from closing in on a quarter-final place in the Embassy world championship at the Crucible Theatre, Sheffield, vesterday.

The match resumes at 10am loday with O'Sullivan holding a 9-7 lead over Joe Perry. the world No 74, who has acquitted himself admirably on his debut in the last 16 of a ranking lournament.

O'Sullivan therefore needs only four of the remaining nine frames to provide the next opposition for John Parrott and remain on course to capture a title that his natural talent, if not his application, deserves.

The second session was a showcase for all that is appealing and frustrating about the 23-year-old from Chigwell. who has already won the United Kingdom championship twice and, at the peak of his powers, is unstoppable. A well-crafted 66 clearance to black enabled O'Sullivan to erase a 53-point deficit in the ninth frame and further successes were achieved with runs of 54 and 76. However, from 6-3 to 6-6, O'Sullivan lacked focus and accuracy.

Sensing danger, he re-established a two-frame cushion at 8-6, but Perry fluked the pink to a balk pocket to steal the fifteenth frame fortuitously and was unexpectedly set to end the day on level terms when 44-0 ahead late in the sixteenth.

Perry, responsible for the first-round elimination of Steve Davis, missed a delicate blue to a middle pocket. John Hopkins, page 33 though, and O'Sullivan, displaying exceptional positional skill, replied with 74 to improve his chance of progress significantly.

Stephen Lee produced an outstanding first session to take a 6-2 lead over Alan McManus and, had it not been for a bizarre conclusion to the fifth frame, his healthy overnight advantage would surely nave been even more commanding. Lee was solid. self-assured and fluent.

Trailing 68-23 with one red on the table in the fifth, Mc-Manus needed three snookers. But the whole complexion of the frame changed when Lee went in-off while essaying a safety sbot, unluckily leaving a free ball and McManus produced a clearance of 42 to snatch it on the black

Showing considerable mental toughness. Lee recovered from 50 points adrift to win the sixth frame with a greento-black clearance and subsequently added runs of 87 and 104 in the closing frames of the afternoon to earlier contributions of 49, 89, 128 and 68.

The equation for inclusion among the elite top 16 in the world rankings next season, complex at the start of the championship nine days ago. is now simple. Tony Drago's 13-8 second-round defeat by Matthew Stevens on Saturday guarantees that, for an umprecedented twentieth con-secutive campaign, Steve Davis will be a member. Unless James Wattana reaches the final, Jimmy White will also regain top-16 status.

Slough on course for treble

By CATHY HARRIS

A BRACE of penalty-corner goals by Jane Smith, the England striker, kept Slough on course to complete a domestic treble when they beat Chelmsford 4-0 in the semi-finals of the EHA Cup. to set up a meeting with Leicester next month.

Leicester were made to work harder for their place in the final, beating their tocal rivals, Olion. I-0. They sealed the result in the 24th minute when Justine Williams, the Welsh forward, swept the ball in after an excellent move involving Kirsty Bowden and Sarah Blanks.

Displaying admirable determination, Olion maintained the pressure throughout the contest. There were glimpses of class from Barbara Hambly, their veteran midfield player, and Lucilta Wright. the teenager, but the quality of their finishing was poor.

However. Slough, who could also have paid a heavy price for missed opportunities, coasted home. Despite the absence of Sue Chandler. their captain, who is resting a knee injury. Sarah Kelleher. of Ireland, and Ali Burd, who were unavailable, the premier division champions were rarely tested.

Smith struck in the sixth and 28th minutes, with Anna Bennett and Mandy Nicholson on target after the break. Katy Roberts, the Chelmsford goalkeeper, celebrated her recent international selection by saving two second-half penalty strokes, taken by Lesley Hobley, and twice denying

In the two match play-off for tenth place in the restructured premier division next season, Surbiton defeated Hounslow 3-0 on Saturday. The feturn match takes place on May 8. Peterborough Town and Formby, having won the cross-over play-offs, qualified for the second division next season. Both teams have previously played in the National League. (*)

SPORT IN BRIEF

SHOOTING: Great Britain's attempt to win the rifle shooting world championship for the third successive time ended in narrow failure in Bloemfontein, South Africa, where the host country became the new holders of the Palma Trophy (David Powell writes). Britain had to settle for the runners-up spot as South Africa won by less than a central bull's eye, the narrowest winning margin under the present rules. Britain effectively lost the championship on the first day, at 800 metres in high winds. A valiant fightback on the second day of the 12-nacon contest saw Britain reduce the deficit from 25 points to eight at the end. South Africa scored t4,081.599 points to Britain's 14,073.598. New Zealand were third on 14,044.568.

FOOTBALL: Croydon are a point away from winning the Wumen's Premier League title after an impressive 4-0 home triumph over Tranmere Rovers yesterday, which extended their nubeaten run to 17 games (Cathy Gibb writes). Debbie Bampton, Carmaine Walker, Jemma Hunt and Jo Broadhurst scored the goals at The Arena. a victory that augurs well, for they meet the same opposition next Sunday.

FENCING: Louise Bond-Williams won the silver medal at the women's world cadet sabre championships in Dijon, France. on Saturday. Bond-Williams, from Chipping Campden. Oxfordshire, was beaten by Marianna Ticarico, of Italy, 15-12 in the final. Bond-Williams, 16, earlier had beaten Liz Jones, her Stratford club colleague. Flora Scalato, of Italy, and Ekaler ECYCLING: Michael Boogerd, the Dutch national champion. frustrated Lance Armstrong, of the United States, to win the Amstel Gold race, the fifth round of the World Cup, by a hair's breadth in Maastricht (Jeremy Whittle writes). The climax, though, was marred by a crash involving a photographer's motorcycle and two of the riders in the four-man leading group.

EMOTORCYCLING: Troy Bayliss, of Australia, heads the chase for the Motor Cycle News British superbike title after a superb third-round winning double on his INS Ducati at Oulton Park yesterday opened an eight-point advantage over Chris Walker, the Kawasaki rider. "It feels great, but there is more to come." Bayliss, who secured a double for the first time, said, Walker finished in third and fourth places.

■ REAL TENNIS: Penny Lumiey retained the Guy Salmon women's world championship with an impressive display of coolness and determination at Hampton Court yesterday. She defeated Sue Haswell, the Nn 2 seed, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 after trailing 2-4 in the deciding set. The tightest final of recent years saw Lumley capture a record fifth world title.

MIKE GARSIDE'S hopes of winning the fourth and final stage of the Around Alone Race from Punte del Este to Charleston are in the balance as J. P. Mouligne, of France, the class two leader, closed the gap after trailing the Briton for 14 days.

As both sailors moved into the southern edge of The Dol-drum belt, Mouligne, who has won every leg of the race so far in Cray Valley, had reduced Garside's lead by nearly 60 miles to 145 miles with just over 3,000 miles left. "I know J. P. is going to close up soon." Garside said from his Finot-designed racer. Magellan Alpha. 'The race could well be decided in the next few days. We are both nursing damaged boats and bodies and we could both take il easy now, but that's not in my nature and I don't think it's in Mouligne's either." In Barcelona, Ortwin Kandler's Corel 45, Faster K-Yole, produced an impressive fourth and final stage of the Trofeo Majorica to take the se-ries title, ahead of David Maclean, in Babbalaas, and Graham Walker, in Indulgence.

The series saw three Britishregistered boats racing, with Chris Little's Bounder also among the seven-strong field. Maclean's crew started the last day on Saturday tied with Faster K-Yote, steered by Bertrand Pace, but the French boat was unbeatable. Eddie Warden Owen, who was at the helm of Babbalaas, said: " It couldn't have been much worse."

Eastbourne quick to pick Lemon

By TONY HOARE

EASTBOURNE boosted their struggling team by signing a rider often painted as the villain at the Sussex track when they agreed a deal with Mark Lemon, the Australia international. Lemon, who missed the Australian season because of a knee injury and was put on the transfer list at Poole at his own request during the winter, is now fully fit and comes in on loan to replace Seemond Stephens.

Jon Cook, the Eastbourne co-promoter, is hoping Lemon, 26, will be available for the meeting with Coventry at Arlington on Saturday, as the Eagles seek to recover from two consecutive home defeats. Lemon's appearance in Eastbourne colours marks a remarkable turnaround, as he has been a regular thorn in the Eagles' side for the past two seasons. Poole and Eastbourne have rarely seen eye to eye and Lemon became involved in the long-running feud when the two clubs met in the 1997 Speedway Star cup final. He said that everyone wanted to see the Eagles lose the final because of their attitude and, although Poole were beaten beavily over the two legs, his words have never been forgotten in Eastbourne Cook was happier to stress the positive aspects of baving a track specialist in his side in time for the league campaign. "Mark has been a target of ours for a long time and we are very pleased to sign him."

FA Carling Premiership: O'Leary's young side displays richness of its potential

Leeds stake claim as pretenders to throne

IN THE midst of their increasingly gripping struggle to dominate the present. Manchester United got a worry-Manchester ing glimpse of the future at Elland Road Leeds United side, buzzing with youthful energy and pre-yesterday a vibrant UNITED Footbali Corespondent cocious skills, took them to the limits of their endurance. It may be too late for David O'Leary's side to enter the championship contest, but they played with such verve and commitment that recent suggestions that their evolution is following a similar path to the one masterminded by Alex Ferguson gained considerably more credence.

In the process of dashing Mancunian hopes of returning to the top of the FA Carling Premiership, they also made a bold statement of in-tent. Ferguson has Arsenal and Chelsea to worry about this season. but this was a warning that next year, and in years to come, Leeds will be more concerned with emulating them than frustrating them.

Even if Manchester United were some way short of their best, even if the heroics of the past two weeks appeared to have taken their toll on David Beckham and Dwight Yorke in particular, a Leeds side that contained six players under the age of 21 did more to expose their fatigue than many others could have done.

They had one piece of good forrune, when Yorke missed a chance to win the match with what was, literally, the last kick of the game, blazing his shot high over the bar after a one-two with Teddy Sheringham — but they had proved by then that they deserved their luck.

SPEEDHA

In Harry Kewell. the young Australian, they had the game's outstanding player. Time and again, Kewell marauded through the middle of the Manchester United midfield, splitting them open with his dashing runs and his pre-cise, incisive passing. Roy Keane and Nicky Butt were their usual combative selves, but even in this department, Leeds outdid them. David Batty and his apprentices. Lee Bowyer and Stephen McPhail, choked their opponents whenever they had possession.

In attack, Jimmy Floyd Hasselbaink and Alan Smith were a constant source of discomfort to David May, a late replacement for Jaap Stam, and Wes Brown, At the back, Jonathon Woodgate was a commanding, unflustered presence who will surely become a full England regular sooner rather than later.

Kewell had given the first hint of what was to come in the third minute, when he skipped past a lunge from Keane and crossed deep to the back post, where the unmarked Bowyer should have done better than to head on to the roof of the net. Leeds went close again in the eleventh minute, when May failed to clear Bowyer's cross and Smith thumped his shot into Schmelchel's chest.

Smith wasted an even better chance two minutes later after Kewell had caused havoc and slipped a pass out to the right of the area. Smith, usually a deadly finisher, dragged his shot wide.

Leeds's single moment of anxiety in the first half came when Beckham's corner squirted through to the far post, where May tried to prod it in. Martyn, flat on his back, kicked it away and then did so again when Cole stabbed it goalwards.

Kewell missed another chance when he glanced a header wide from a corner by Harte corner, but he made amends soon after that by creating the opportunity that put Leeds ahead. He picked the ball up just inside the Manchester United just inside the Manchester United half after a careless pass from Butt had efuded Keane. When he reached the edge of the area, he threaded a pass through to Hasselbaink and the Dutch forward tricked Schmeichel into thinking that he was going to try to take the ball round him before squeezing his shot inside him and in off the post. However, the visitors did not buckle. They dragged themselves hack into the game at the start of the second half and equalised in the 55th minute, when Keane's cross his header and Cole forced it over the line from close range, injuring Woodgate at the same time.

After that, the frenetic pace of the game slowed and the chances became fewer. Smith failed to make the most of a slip by Brown 13 minutes from the end, shooting straight at Schmeichel, but if Yorke had scored in injury time, defeat would have been hard for Leeds to swallow. O'Leary, who signed a new five-year contract worth an estimat-ed £6 million yesterday morning, had no thoughts of grantude or re-lief, merely determination to contin-ue the pursuit of Manchester United next season.

"I have got a fantastic group of young lads here," O'Leary said. They can cope with the big occasions, don't worry about that. They want to play on the big stage, believe me. United are our yardstick and in the years to come we will be chasing them and hounding them, home and away."

Ferguson's consolation, perhaps, is that Arsenal and Chelsea have still to negotiate Leeds in their own run-ins. King-makers this season. they may yet be the kings before

Blackburn look ill-equipped for moment of truth

BRIAN KIDD has scoured Europe to keep up to date with the latest coaching innovations, but there is nothing that Ajax, Barcelona or Juventus can come up with that can help now. His management has been stripped to its essence - the ability of one man to motivate II others. The injury list, long and horrendous, means that there is a little that he can do to refresh his Blackburn Rovers team. Confidence is plunging and luck is running against them. Yet, somehow, this week he must try to bring about a transformation before they travel to Charlion Athletic, where defear could be a pretude to dropping out of the FA Carling Premiership. This is a match to be watched from a hiding place behind the sofa.

Kidd, a talented coach, is being asked tactical questions that are tying him in knots. A genial man, the Rovers manager is being stretched to snapping point and midway through the first half on Saturday, it appeared that his agitation had boiled over into race.

With his defence already traumatised by a laughable first goal. Kidd became incensed by the provocative touchline antics of Phil Thompson, the Liverpool coach, after an accidental foul by McAteer on Riedle. It did not take a lipreading expert to guess that the Middleton Middleweight was offering the Liverpool Lip

"It was just something from the Manchester United and Liverpool old days," Gérard Houlier, the Anfield manage er, said. "It made me laugh more than anything." But Kidd, despite an apology from Thompson, was still glowering a long time later. 'You had better ask Thompson about it." he snapped.

Kidd's mood may grow darker still because, with four games to save Rovers from relegadon - including a visit from Manchester United only someone with Jack Walker's riches would bet on them surviving. They refused

Tragedy, farce, melodrama. There was a bit of everything from Darren Peacock in a mesmerising display. His back pass to John Filan after 22 minutes was unique, flying chest-high at the Rovers goalkeeper, who could neither catch it nor whack it into the stands. Steve McManaman, who was standing only five yards away, needed only to slide in as the goalkeeper slipped and funibled having received what they call in rugby union a hospital

There was little that Rovers could do about Liverpool's second in the 31st minute, apart from stopping them passing from the back, shutting down McManaman as he moved down the right flank and closing in on Jamie Redknapp before he unleashed his rightfoot shot from 25 yards.

McAteer, who appeared to be waiting for the No 37 bus, suddenly decided to rush for it and succeeded only in colliding, allowing Leonhardsen to break through and score.

"At a time when you can question what attitude the players will have, they went out and showed they wanted to win for the fans," Houllier said, although the Liverpool camp should be wary of too much backslapping.

They played well in patches. with Leonhardsen, McManaman and Thompson buzzing around just behind Riedle, but can Houllier really be certain that they would have done so they not been handed such an early and impregnable lead?

Meanwhile, Kidd sought solace in his side's performance in the second half, during which they pulled a goal back Damien Duff's 18-yard volley in the 63rd minute and went close to a second on several occasions.

Nevertheless, il is evident that desperate circumstances are forcing players on to the pitch when not match-fit. These include Henchoz, who grimaced with pain from a groin strain, and Gallacher, who was understandably subdued on his first start since last year.

Admirably, Kidd is still attempting to see the bigger pic-ture and talking of redevelop-ing the club and nurturing its roots. "I worked my way up from the youth at Manchester United over more than ten years, so I have seen how it can happen on and off the pitch." he said - but he will know that it is the minor details that count at this stage of the season, such as Wilcox playing out of position and Ward struggling to hold up the ball. Football feast offers little nourishment

THERE are certain combinations that simply do not gel. no matter how worthy the individual ingredients. Just as sun-dried tomatoes should not be paired with chips, nor, under any circumstances, anchovies with custard, so professional sport makes for uneasy digestion when, for one side at least, nothing is at stake. Fusion football leaves an unpleasant taste: Derby County. vastly superior but mired in the apathy of having so little to play for, Southampton, desperate to wriggle free of the sweaty clutches of relegation. seeping confidence and lacking quality. No goals, no fun and a side-order of ham-fisted

It was a result that sated the appetite of neither, even if the wounds inflicted upon Blackburn Rovers and Charlton Athletic made Southampton's point glitter like a trophy. It was illusory, however. Even if they were to finish fourth from bottom in the FA Carling Premiership — which, laughably. in the circumstances. Dave Jones described as "the best in the world" - another season of strain and purgatory surely

Within the confines of this quite dreadful exhibition, that prospect appears no closer this morning, "We expected Southampion to come after us, because they needed to win, but they didn't." Jim Smith, the Derby manager, shrugged. Seven consecutive defeats away from home have palpably curbed all adventure, all but the most defensive sensibilides, but this was a match that could have offered more.

By the end of a dispiriting aftermoon, only the feline form of Neil Moss soared above the general morass. On three occasions in a lopsided second-half - a marked improvement on the first, nonetheless — the Southampton goalkeeper flung himself at the feet of his aggressors. Twice, Dean Sturridge, the substitute, was repelled in this manner, while a fortunate knee blocked a stubbed shot from Darryl ti will be different at The Dell, of course, even if Leicester City. Southampton's forthcoming opponents, are another team already mentally packing their suitcases for the summer. At their own compact ground, Southampton have not lost since Boxing Day. Perhaps the elusive Man Le Tissier will have recovered from the convenient calf strain that prompled his absence on Saturday. Perhaps the sun will shine. Perhaps there will be no more war, policemen will wear daisies in their hair and burger vans will declare a moratorium on GM foods.

At Pride Park - even the name was a mocking irony all Southampton got was a couple of half-chances from Marians Pahars, the Latvia striker. There was a longrange shot well saved by Mart Poom, a penalty appeal that died in the throat and a precise, grass-cutting cross from James Beattle, which Pahars. in a whirl of limbs, contrived to miss. He made a meal of it all right, but the tastebuds hardly tingled.

THE ROLL YEARS

THERE IS, it seems, nothing like a devastating cup setback to give sparkle to a league campaign. Arsenal's loss to the ten men of Manchester United in their FA Cup semi-final replay appears merely to have sharpened their aim in front of goal, while Leicester City, beaten by Tottenham Holspur's ten men in the Worthington Cup final. have turned their Wembley blues into a purple patch in the FA Carling Premiership.

A deserved victory over Coventry City on Saturday took Leicester's unbeaten record to six matches since they lost the final, comprising three wins. including those at Liverpool and Tonenham Hotspur, and three draws, one of them away to Chelsea. Although the threat of relegation was averted to all intents and purposes halfway through that sequence, a team that plays in the shadow of Martin O'Neill's animated presence on the touchline is never going to mark its arrival at the 40-point safety level by taking forty winks on the pinch. Consequently, the manager could yet celebrate a third consecu-

Gemmill has his spirits lifted as he helps Campbell celebrate another goal that should prove vital to Everton's survival

tive top-ten finish since he took City into the top flight.

Part of the reason for Leicester's revival has been the contribution of their main striker. Emile Heskey. Having attended the same school in Leicester as Gary Lineker and followed his path to Filbert Street, Heskey will further emulate his hero if Kevin Keegan gives his England debut against Hungary in Budapest on Wednesday. As if to emphasise the similarity with his predecessor, Heskey used his unfamiliar role on the right of three forwards to demonstrate the kind of wing skills that Lineker displayed when he was reluctanibanished to the right flank at Barcelona. "He made some really strong runs in the first half." O'Neill said of the 21-year-old. Three of those runs led to bookings for Quinn, Burrows and Shaw as they tried in vain to stop him

Heskey appears to have re-covered from the back injury that, unol recently, restricted his movement and meant that he was frequently unable to complete matches. His failure to score since mid-December. in part because of his fitness problems, needs rectifying, but O'Neill said: "He has played much better for us since the Worthington Cup final." The presence of two 33-yearolds alongside him up front gave Heskey an extra responsi-bility for running, but it was lan Marshall, one of his veteran team-mates, who shouldered the burden of goalscoring for the second consecutive game. In first-half injury time, a corner by Steve Guppy, who has made the most crosses in the Premiership this season, was headed home by Marshall, who has perhaps had the most crosses to bear in a campaign blighted by a persistent hamstring injury.

Soltvedt's late turn and shot was the closest that a disappointing Coventry came to scoring, but, with three games remaining, the likelihood of them being relegated has probably become more remote because the chasers beneath them generally had bad days looked out of sorts, but if he wants encouragement in a goalless run of 14 games, he need only note the name of Heskey in the England squad.

Such are the quirks of a sceptical mind, however, that the forward's prolific form will raise doubts. At 29. Campbell needs to score twice more to reach the total of 100 league goals in England. II is an honourable record, but the present strike rate is a delirious spell that cannot be regarded as typical. Campbell's joy in escaping the miseries he encountered in Turkey and the euphoric reaction of a crowd that yearned for a figurehead have put him in a heightened state of effectiveness. It may be wiser to simply appreciate the vigour with which Everton have met the demands of the moment. Waller Smith, the manager, felt that the game with Charlton had been "tense", but that reaction probably reflected anxieties over league position, rather than the match itself.

As if the risk of falling from the Premiership were nol enough, Chariton must feel persecuted. With his arm outstretched. Don Hutchison charged down a clearance to open the scoring with a shot that squirmed under the goalkeeper, but Paul Alcock, the referee, did not see his handball. Campbell added another from a difficult angle after his first shot was blocked.

Instead of breaking, predictably. on the left, he made his run across the face of a defence that was distracted by the advancing Campbell and accepted a pass on the right of the penalty area to score. Weary Chelsea concede title B

WEARY acceptance overcame Chelsea yesterday. They had not even pulled out of Hillsborough before Gianluca Vialli started talking about plans for next season. His players are already ticking off the days before they will be able to hit the beach.

O MOTHIMAN C

While Manchester United maintain the attack on three fronts, one is proving too many for Vialli's side, who continue to cling to third place in the FA Carling Premiership rather than grabbing it with any certainty. They looked a tired team yesterday, lacking width, pace and the ability to produce the unexpected. Their only consolation was that Leeds United had not made up any ground. Just when they should be flying. Chelsea are with their wings playing dipped

David O'Leary's side travel to Stamford Bridge next week and a draw should be enough for Chelsea to keep them at arm's length in the race for the European Cup. A top-three finish is nothing to be ashamed of for a club that is on a steady rise, but the dellating finale to their season has emphasised only how far they still have to travel rather than how far they have come.

"It is about Manchester United and Arsenal now." Vialli said after his side's third Premiership draw in succession, "and I think that, with the tough games that United still have to play. Arsenal may be slight favourites,

"It is down to those two because we have just not been able to get the wins recently. We are in a better shape than last year, but there is still a way for us to go."

way for us to go."

His team yesterday was substantially different from that which lost to Real Mallorca in the Cup Winners' Cup on Thursday, but the method was just as mundane. Vialli paired himself with Mikael Forsell in tle campaign.

Forsell disappeared at half-time, if he had not done so already, to be replaced by Zola, but there was something horribly rudimentary about this Chelsea display. Desailly, who had been switched into midfield, went through the motions, Wise's promptings came to nought more often than not, while Poyet was taken off on the hour shortly after heading wide one of his team's best chances of the game.

Indeed, if anybody was going to triumph, it was Wednesday, who grew more confident as the game went on, while Chelsea, for whom Kevin Hitchcock deputised in goal, flagged.

Their chances became increasingly tempting, the best falling to Des Walker in the closing moments, but the former. England defender went for it in the style of a man who had not scored in 263 previous games for the club. He scuffed the ball all of five yards goalwards, but he need not have felt embarassed. Exceptional throughout, he had no difficulties subduing Vialli, whose frustration became more evident with every anguished cry.

Walker was the springboard for Wednesday's sprightly second half, in which Mark McKeever, a left winger making his debut two years after joining the club from Peterborough United, showed promising touches, even if, like his teammates, he failed to also display a nose for goal.

"I thought we were going to get the winner as the game went on." Danny Wilson, the Wednesday manager said, "because that is the best we have played for a long time. I thought the players answered a lot of criticism. We probably need one more point to be safe, but it was important getting a confidence boost against a team as good as Chelsea."

While Chelsea cannot afford to neglect their European ambitions over the remaining four games. Wednesday have some of their own. Uefa's bizarre ruling over English qualification may yet provide a "fair-play place" for the team in the FA Carling Premiership with the best disciplinary record and Wilson's side remain in pole position, with their tally yesterday.

"You have to have a lot of sympathy for a team like West Ham, who bave done it weekin and week-out and might not qualify." Wilsoo said, "but that is nothing to do with us. If they [Ucfa] want to give it to us, I will take it with both hands."

only one booking added to Wednesday's record might have been spoilt had the referee not been so lenient when Carbone struck Wise on the back of the head after the Chelsea captain had pulled out the Italian's hair-band in a typically juvenile prank. Carbone escaped without so much as a caution, while Wise was riled, but could not bring himself to retaliate. Truly, Chelsea have resigned themselves to their Breathtaking Arsenal throw down the gauntlet

IT SEEMS to have come with the blossoming of spring, this return of life after the greyness of winter. These past few weeks. England has been treated to a festival of football to quicken the pulse and stir the emotions. At the Riverside on Saturday, the exuberance cootinued unabated.

Arsenal's performance on Teesside amounted to a celebration of the sport, a glorious display of attacking, exotic skill that had even the Middlesbrough supporters standing on their feet to appland in wonder and admiration.

This was a match played in the spirit of Manchester United's victory over Juventus, of their dramatic triumph over Arsenal in that classic FA Cup semi-final replay and of Arsenal's own trouncing of Wimbledon last Monday.

bledon last Monday.

It was thrilling, breathtaking stuff. Even Gary Pallister, the battle-hardened Middlesbrough defender, used those words to describe it. Bryan Robson, the Middlesbrough manager, said it was the best display that he had seen by any side this season.

It has got to the stage now, with only a handful of games left to decide the destiny of the championship, where United and Arsenal are almost daring each other to surpass what has gone before, as if they are setting new standards of excellence every time they play.

It is not like the traditional climax to a season, the usual glut of tense, tight games decided by one defensive error, one incisive move. This is free-flowing uninhibited magic, it will have to stop somewhere, but, for now, it is wonderful just to lap it op.

Arsenal were so good on Saturday that their supporters took pity on the home fans. A strange sort of camaraderie sprung up between them, as something special brought them together. And so, late in the second half, the Arsenal supporters urged Middlesbrough on. They jeered good humouredly when Tony Adams shot high over the crossbar, they even leapt up and down when Alun Armstroog got Middlesbrough's empty consolation goal three minutes from the final whistle.

By then, of course, they knew that they had all but wiped out the advantage in goal difference that United had held over them, they knew they had gone to the top of the table for the first time this season and that United would be feeling the heat of their challenge.

Arsenal had taken the lead in the third minote. Patrick Vieira bamboozled Andy Townsend by flicking the ball casually over his head and when he slipped a pass through to Nicolas Anelka. Steve Vickers mistimed his tackle and Marc Overmars

David Seaman made two

Arsenal went further ahead seven minutes before half-time when Vicira fed another pass through to Anelka and the French forward elipped his left-foot shot beyond Mark Schwarzer. A few seconds before the interval, the visitors killed the game off. Anelka, keen to impress after some recent lacklustre performances and a game cooling his heels in the stand, crossed from the right, Kanu sidestepped Gordon and curled his shot deliberately into the corner from six yards out.

That, though, was prosaic compared with what followed. If anything, Arsenal stepped up a gear and, before an hour had gone, they went four ahead with a goal of beautiful simplicity, economy and selflessness. Vieira started and finished this one. He played a one-two that freed Anelka oo the right and then hurtled towards the box. Anelka cut inside and teed up Overmars who shaped to shoot but passed the ball square to Vieira instead and the Frenchman stroked it past Schwarzer.

Eveo that, though, was surpassed by Kanu's second two minutes later. Standing 12 yards out, Kano seemed to have few options when Lee Dixon curied a knee-high cross towards him, but he astonished the crowd and Schwarzer by leaping into the air and executing the first volleyed drag-back flick most of us had ever seen. It flew beyood the goalkeeper into the corner of the net.

Twelve minutes before the end. Kanu turned provider, rolling a short pass to Anelka, who stepped inside Vickers and lashed his shot high into the net off the hands of Schwarzer. It was almost a relief when Armstrong rose to glance bome Townsend's free kick, but it says much for the Arsenal defence that even in the midst of this carnival, it spoilt their day. "They did not like that." Arsene Wenger said, after the game.

The scary thing is, it gives them something to improve upon for next time. Apart from that, this was perfection.

Berkovic restores calm

THE senses were in danger of blurring after a whirlwind afternoon at White Hart Lane, but one observation was undeniable. West Ham United cannot afford, no matter how high the price, to lose Eyal Berkovic.

The only sense aroused when the Israel ioternational had the ball against Tottenham Hotspur was one of rare calm. His positional play, his first touch and the timing of his passes was soothing indeed. He did not score, but he made sure that his team could enjoy a satisfying victory.

of the anticipated rebuilding

work to be sanctioned by Gérard Houllier, the Liverpool manager. No wonder, too, that Liverpool plan to float the club on the Stock Market, for they will need plenty of funds to prise their target away from Uptoo Park.

There are players going for four and five million pounds that are not fit to lace Eyal's boots," Harry Redknapp, the West Harm manager, said. "Someone would have to pay a lot of money for him, but I am not talking figures because it sounds like I want to sell him. I don't and Eyal has never shown to me that he wants to leave West Ham."

The manner in which Red-knapp has strengthened the club is a tribute to his managerial skills. Persuading Berkovic to join West Ham instead of Totenham in the first place of Tottenham in the first place was useful, but oow West Ham stand at a crossroads and Berkovic sums up their predicament. Peter Storrie, the director of football, was dismissed at the end of last week, in a move that left Redknapp "shocked and mystified". The side are sixth in the FA Carling Premiership and, regardless of the confusion over qualification for the Uefa Cup, deserve a place in Eu-

Berkovic created their first goal on Saturday after four minutes, a move that was finished by lan Wright, who chipped the ball into an empty net from 30 yards. Midway through the second half, a pass by Berkovic found Mare Keller and he ran on to slip the ball under Ian Walker's body to extend the lead.

Then Tottenham — and the match — exploded into life. David Ginola gave the home side hope of saving a point with another glorious goal and the tension had mounted sufficiently for John Moncur to lose his temper in injury time. He scythed down José Dominguez, prompting a mèlée in the middle of the field and a red card from Uriah Rennie, the referee.

The acrimony did oot stop there. Ginola had words with Retiknapp as they left the field, one Tottenham fan made a complaint to the police about the celebrations of Steve Lomas while Moneur, surrounded by West Ham fans, showed no remorse for his sending-off.

Gullit's mind elsewhere

THE problem with a long engagement is that it can become the focal point of a bride's entre existence. Newcastle United have absolutely nothing to divert them from their FA Cup Final date with Manchester United and so while Alex Ferguson should turn up at Wembley his head in a whirl, unsure of the colour of the kit bags and the name of the coach driver, Ruud Gullit will be worrying to the last minute how the napkins will be folded at the post-match dinner.

Watching this PA Carling Premiership match was like having dinner with companions whose minds were elsewhere. They smiled at the anecdotes, even embarked on a couple themselves, but quite clearly the fare bypassed their taste buds and the ambience failed to stir their souls.

For Wimbledon, the distraction has been poor form and the continued absence of Joe Kinnear, fobidden by his doctors to lead the team since his heart attack in March. So fragile is the club previously known as the Crazy Gang that David Kemp, the stand-in manager, opted to bolster the defence when the scoreline stood at 1-1 and it was anyone's game. But if Wimbledon can take heart from only their second point in eight matches, then perhaps the sacrifice of John Hartson, who scored his first goal since his £7.5 million transfer — a strike from a tight angle — was worth it.

By Alyson Rudd

Newcastle were similarly insular. Their supporters crammed into Selhurst Park and deserved to witness some passion. but Gullit, it seems, only has eyes for May 22 and the all-important choice of player for the big day. He made five changes to the side he named in midweek for the trip to Hillsborough and will no doubt continue to rotate his players until he finds the perfect combination to outwit Fer-

Gullit is even engrossed in the honeymoon period. There have been rumblings on Tyneside that Gullit has three highprofile signings in mind and the identity of one was revealed yesterday when it emerged he had placed a bid of £10 million for Dani, the Real Mallora striker, whose goal in the first leg of the Cup Winners' Cup semi-final effectively put Chelsea out of the connectition.

In the meantime, Newcastle are relying on Alan Shearer. The England captain is not what he was, but even a less sharp version is valuable and he gave Newcastle the lead, after Maric set up Hamann for a cross to the far post.

Hamann will be a crucial figure at Wembley. The Germany midfield player combines strength with guile and, after daintily exchanging passes with Solano, saw Sullivan dive at full stretch to deny him the winner from a vicious strike. That the best chance of a winner came in the first half illustrated how tame the second became.

er than most. Both teams are under investigation after they finished their Uefa Cup semi-final on Tues-day night with fists and boots flying and the unseemly vio-lence that followed the penalty that put the French club into the final then had its repercussions when both teams returned home. Each was demolished 4-0 in league action over the weekend. For Marseilles, the defeat could be costly indeed. They lead the French championship by a single point and their goal

Vieri's header gives Lazio leading edge difference is now worse than

Bordeaux, their rivals, after surrendering to Lens on Saturday, with two of the goals coming from Tony Vairelles and two from Daniel Moreira. Yesterday. Bologna succumbed to Salernitana by the same score in Serie A.

At the top of the Italian championship, Lazio kept their one-point advantage after a classic headed goal from Christian Metallic and the championship. tian Vieri, the Italy centre for-ward, put Sampdoria further a change, this, for Vieri, who, trived to miss far easier chanc-es when Lazio showed disdainful disregard for the Cup Winners Cup. Nevertheless, their victory over Sampdoria in Genoa was clouded by bitter controversy. Vieri's goal was sweet enough, coming on the hour and vindi-cating the best moment that the referee had enjoyed all afternoon. He had seen a blatant Sampdoria foul, but allowed Almeyda to continue Lazio's momentum and Sergio Conceicao to pinpoint his cross to the race, between Lazio and Milan. Both Parma, defeated 1-0 by AS Roma, and Fiorentina, who fell to Juventus, have lost for persistent diving. The refe-ree twice denied Sampdoria The mood of mourning in Italy, after Manchester United's defeat of Juventus, was not lifted at the San Siro, where Marcello Lippi, who is soon to be inducted as the £3 million-a-year coach at Internazionale, saw the team that he will inherit derided by their supporters and dismantled by Udinese, 3-1. Inter, in ninth place, may not be place in Europe next season. In Germany, Bayern Mu-nich, the opponents for United in the European Cup final next month, were held 1-1 by 1860 in the Munich derby. Markus Babbel scored early on for Bayern, but two minutes from the end the league leaders allowed Marco Kurz to equalise. In Germany, too, there is a twohorse race for the otle, but even though Ulf Kirsten ensured a fifth straight win for Bayer

That was it, 1-0 for Lazio, their first win in four faltering league contests. The E70 milfion Roman team had Almeyda dismissed for his second cuation, an instinctive handball, but Ariel Ortega, Sampdoria's Argentina international, was then also shown the red card.

ern are eight points ahead.

Spanish fans scarcely know whether it is best to rejoice in pleasures of the present, or the promise of the future. Their next generation handsomely won the World Youth Cup in Nigeria over the weekend, beating Japan in the final, and, as Chelsea will verify, there are hidden strengths to the Spanish game.

Wolves pay price for penalty miss

Wolverhampton Wanderers 1 West Bromwich Albion.....1

By A CORRESPONDENT

FORTUNE failed to favour the brave at Molineux yesterday as Wolverhampton Wanderers took another tentative step towards the Nationwide League first division

Keith Curle, their captain, had the opportunity to secure three points and erase the memory of an own goal that settled the Black Country derby at The Hawthorns in August, 1997, However, his 54thminute penalty was appallingly high and it will be West Bromwich Albion who derive most satisfaction from the points shared with their local rivals

Denis Smith, the West Bromwich manager, acknowledged Curle's courage in stepping up to try to convert the spot kick. "It's easy to criticise, but it took a lot of bottle to take a penalty in a match like this," he said. "Having said that, I was delighted when it went over."

Wolves remain in sixth place after this result, one that confirmed the participation in the play-offs of their other near-neighbours, Birmingham City, and ended the lingering hopes of Sheffield United. Now Wolves, Bolton Wanderers and Watford are the three candidates for the final two places.

Graham Taylor, the Watford manager, has asserted that there is no better time to overtake your opponents than on the tape and if his side win away to Port Vale tomorrow night, they will emerge as favourites, with Wolves and Bolton due to play one another at the Reebok Stadium on Friday

Despite the loss of two points, Colin Lee, the Wolves manager, was not downhearted. "We're disappointed but not deflated," Lee, whose team have lost just once in the last 18 games, said. "Everyone at the club has worked for this and there is a massive determination among all the players to get on

Much that endeavour appeared to dissolve after 18 when Micky Evans escaped his defensive marker inside the Wolves area and struck his right-foot shot past Stowell to put West Bromwich ahead.

It was a familiar scenario for visiting supporters. Although without a win in their past seven games, the most important statistic for them in what has been a season of underachievement was the three successive victories over Wolves without conceding a goal.

After a succession of passes, Wolves equalised when a free kick by Simpson to the far post eluded those players in a packed six-yard box before Carl Robinson found a decisive touch on ground level at the far post.

Curle's fateful moment arrived after a graceful one-two between Muscat and Robinson allowed the former to advance ioto the penalty area. There, the hustling attentions of Kilbane saw Muscat fall to the floor and Peter Eastwood, the assistant referee who had replaced

Wolves had two late chances to win: Keane, a substitute, shot over and with a minute left. Bull, also on as substitute, discovered that several months out of first-team action had dulled his sharpness as Burgess, the West Bromwich captain, recovered to challenge after the striker had been presented with the rare commodities of time and space in front of goal.

BY PETER ROBINSON

NEWCASTLE United's may be the most passionate, Manchester City's the longest suffering. Manchester United's the most numerous (outside the North West, obviously), but Ipswich Town supporters must be the most fair-minded in football. On Saturday, after their team had been beaten at home by opponents from right at the bottom of the Nationwide League first division, they stood and applauded the vic-tors off the pitch.

No matter that Ipswich's hopes of automatic promotion to the FA Carling Premiership had been holed suspiciously close to the waterline. that their precious second place in the race had been lost within sight of the finish; that all their anticipation and optimism had suffered a shuddering jolt, they silenced a few. frustrated seconds of booing with an ovation that rippled around Portman Road

Crewe Alexandra deserved no less. They were magnificent, a tribute to Dario Gradi, their manager, and the values he holds dear. Play the game the right way, play it fairly and win on merit or not at all and they won this match full square on merit, making a mockery of their position in the league. If they are relegated after a performance like this - winning against the odds with just ten men on the field during its thrilling finale - there is no justice in the world. If Ipswich miss out on the Premiership again. they should console themselves with the knowledge that some things are simply more important. Gradi dominated the day. He had promised beforehand that Crewe would get at least a draw, that they would score a few goals --"it would just be a question of whether we could keep them out"— and played his tactical hand to per-fection, selecting just one striker and trusting that the quicksilver Rodney Jack would unsettle the big lpswich back three. He did and Ips wich, outnumbered and often outplayed in midfield, had no answer.

Crewe went ahead after 63 minntes, Jack swinging a pass wide to the right while Venus sent him fly-ing, then Rivers running on before turning inside Mowbray and shooting under the goalkeeper. It should have been 2-0, too, but Mowbray es-caped punishment when he felled Jack inside the penalty area -an injustice that was compounded when, moments later, David Johnson fell over Walton's leg at the other end. Venus scored from the spot.

For a while, it seemed as if heroism and high principles would not be enough for Crewe, especially when Jermaine Wright was sent off, a late tackle earning a second, unlucky booking in the 76th minute, but they would not be denied. With seven minutes left. Smith swung in a corner. Macauley appeared, un-marked, to volley it in and Ipswich marked, to volley it in and Ipswich could not escape a second time.

By KETTH PIKE

QUIZ question: who finished the inaugural Premier League campaign as the capital's top club? No. Wrong again. Not them, either. Yes, it really was. Queens Park Rangers' fall from grace has been dramatic and traumatic and the lift may not have reached the ground

The club that lorded it over London so recently could find next season that only Barnet are operating at a lower level and, let's face it, life doesn't get more undistinguished than that. "Results don't lie and our results over the past two years speak for themselves." Gerry Francis, the director of football, admitted after their defear to Bradford City on Saturday. This is a good football club, but it needs a lot of help." What it needs most of all, though, is a win. Any win. Three points would almost certainly be enough to prevent QPR's descent into the Nationwide League second division. but they have hit poor form again at exactly the wrong time. This was their fourth successive defeat and they have the best part of a full team either crocked or banned with

"I don't think anyone's too good to go down," Francis said. QPR are certainly not too good. A club that could once boast Bowles and Marsh, that finished fifth in the Premier League as recently as 1993 with Ferdinand and Wilkins to the fore, is now dependent on the likes of Baraclough, Kulcsar and Jeanne for salvation. Fine players they may prove to be in time; but time is not on QPR's side. For half an hour, their mix of perspiration and desperation - inspiration was strictly off limits - matched Bradford's more measured approach. But once they had gone behind to Beagrie's goal against the run of play, QPR were a beaten side. Worse still, they looked like they knew it.

Westwood struck a second on the hour. Gallen gave QPR brief hope with ten minutes left, but Watson hit a third for Bradford after Westwood and Ready had gone forehead to forehead like a pair of stags without the antiers (or the intelligence). Both seigned their innocence. Both went through the motions of appearing distraught at being sent off. Both. to be honest, made complete fools of themselves.

Bradford did not need telling the significance of the day's events, here and at Portman Road. Their goal tally is so superior to Ipswich Town's that victories against Oxford United on Saturday and away to Wolverhampton Wanderers eight days later will see them promoted to heights that were last attained in 1922. Taylor intends to go for broke BY KEVIN EASON

EVEN as the final whistle sounded, a tracksuited Graham Taylor was urging his Watford players into attack, his arms whirling like a demented air steward, pointing out the exits which lead to the FA Carling Premiership. Taylor says that this will be the week that could decide whether his side will be in the Natiouwide League first division play-offs. They have a tough game away to Port Vale tomorrow, one they have to win to retain hopes of gaining a place among the contenders.

Yet while everything is going their way — Watford are the team in form, this victory being their fifth in succession - Taylor is only too conscious of the fact that they could lose out by virtue of the number of goals scored if they finish from Sun Jihai. Micah Hyde equal on points for the fourth play-off position. It was agony for him as his players shot over the bar, wide of the posts and almost anywhere but into the net - and then he had to suffer further as Palace purimelled his defence into giving away a late goal.

"The last ten minutes were really nerve-racking because we had not been able to kill them off with a third goal," he said. "That has happened to us in the last few games where we have not finished the job. We need the goals just to

Their first on Saturday,

had performed valiant work to get to the byline, but his cross was a trickling effort that could have been dealt with easily by Kevin Miller, the Palace goalkeeper. Unfortunately, in the words of Steve Coppell, the Palace manager, there was a "communications breakdown". The goalkeeper called, but the Chinese defender swished at the ball and helped it into the net while Miller stood baffled. At least Palace, with little to play for but pride, did not lie down, playing with three for-wards to trouble the Watford defence. That always had the promotion-chasers on edge. Taylor said, and confirmed his opinion that Coppell's young side is one of potential. A goal from Tommy Moon-cy, after 53 minutes, still did not settle the ocrves, particularly when Palace, after 87 minutes, managed a meaningful cross that Morrisoo flicked on and McKenzie headed into the net.

Nevertheless, Watford won through. Three games left and all must be won if they are to reach the target of 79 points' set by Taylor. "We would be desperately unlucky not to be in the play-offs with a total like that." he said. "It is up to like that," he said. "It is up to us now, nobody else."

FOR a team regarded as promotion certainties since early this year. Cambridge United are making heavy weather of reclaiming their place in the Naconwide League second division. Their failure to beat a Peterborough United side reduced to ten men in a derby bristling with endeavour and passion means they have won only two of their past seven games. They still need six points from their remaining four games to be guaranteed playing at a higher level next season and the third division title is no longer at their mercy.

Not that Roy McFarland, the Cambridge manager, is losing any sleep just yet -even if his frantic demeanour on the touchline on Saturday suggested that he is, at the very least, growing impatient. We've got a young squad and perhaps they are feeling the tension a little bit," he said afterwards. "We let ourselves down today, but I'm still positive we will be promoted.

Cambridge's biggest league crowd in seven years packed into the Abbey Stadium, but it was the visiting supporters who found their voices first when Giuliano Grazioli headed home from close range in the seventh minute.

Bristol rage over life's injustices

Bristol City Birmingham City.....2

By NICK SZCZEPANIK

IT IS an unquestioned part of football lore that when you are struggling, nothing goes in your favour. Followers of Bristol City would concur with that after a game in which all the significant decisions - a disallowed goal, a penalty refused and a penalty awarded - went against their team. To that can be added a poor backpass that led to the deciding goal as the home side, desperate for points in their quest to escape relegation, were instead firmly consigned to the ne can only assume that it was for light relief rather than salvation that Nottingham Forest hired Ron Atkinson this season, and even his jokes had lost their sparkle by the end. Now he has announced that he will retire this summer and we will not see his like again, except perhaps in the music halls of Blackpool. His dodgy tan and weak gags would make him a perfect compère and he already has the catchphrase. "Come on down," as he told the Forest supporters.

Big Ron could manage fool-ball clubs for fun, but, like anyone who relies too much on laughter to make themselves popular, the fun was increasingly at his expense. It was clear that he had lost his comic oming when he arrived at Forest in January and, swept away by the faint ripple of applause from the lerraces. promptly sat down in the Arsenal dugout.

"I knew it was the wrong one when the some guy introduced himself as Dennis Bergkamp," Atkinson quipped, but we were already laughing at, rather than with, him, Forest lost 1-0 and the jokes, like his team, became increasingly laboured.

The announcement of his impending departure from the City Ground was barely more dignified. With his exclusive story sold already to one Sunday tabloid, Atkinson ducked and dived through his obligatory press conference after the 2-0 defeat away to Aston Villa on Saturday, which con-demned Forest to the Nationwide League first division. "You'll be the last to know." he said, before taking the money and running.

To be fair, as Big Ron would say, he enlivened more than his share of back pages during a managerial career that has lasted 28 years and 11 jobs, He even had a bit of success along and jewellery the way, a modest player with Oxford United who worked his image has way up the ladder from Cambridge United, where he enstuck with me' joyed successive promotions in the late Seventies, to West Bro-mwich Albion, where he guided a modest chib into Europe. However, it was his five years at Manchester United beand ended up squandering a ten-point lead.

There was only one factor tween 1981 and 1986 that best characterised a coach who was always regarded as too decadent to join the greats. Not for him the austere work ethic of a thieves were disappointed not to find my place bulging with gold watches and trinkets."

Yet Atkinson has hardly been shy when it comes to selfpromotion. His autobiography -A Different Ball Game - inchuded scandalous and unsubstantiated allegations of drug-taking involving an England international and opinion was divided, although certainly not down the middle, as to whether it was an attempt to rid the game of the scourge of drugs or a quick ruse to sell would have thought that Atkin-son would be the last person to spread unfounded rumours, given that he has had to endure his own share regarding financial affairs. Several reports were published in the mid-Eighties hat his transfer dealings were being investigated by the Inland Revenue and although he was cleared of all such allegations, it hardly helped to purify his image.

Soon it will be all over and the game will have lost a character whose gregariousness and passion could not spare him from the reality that, at 60, he had lost his touch. "He thought that he could come in. tell a few jokes and everything would be all right," one of his predecessors at Forest said, but he underestimated how bad the problems were and he overestimated how much he had left in him."

Certainly, Atkinson ap-peared to have run out of oneliners by yesterday. "If there are any international committees looking for an experienced man, they can always give me a ring," he said, but it was not much of a parting shot.

Crucible containing the whole of sport

t was one of those moments that said it all. Rather a long moment, as it hapshowed us time ticking away. It was one of those curious, suspended moments in sport in which time doesn't stand still.

It was the time that John Parrott took to play his shot in his match against Chris Small in the snooker world championship at The Crucible. Parrott was faced with a tricky shot during a safety duel with Small (incidentally, it is a strange fact of snooker that the safety exchanges — the nearest that snooker gets to a head-to-head confrontation, the nearest a player gets to making a tackle - are more interesting than the scoring). We had Parrott looking fraught, looking furrowed, looking hag-ridden by doubt, wagging his head, raising his clown's pointed cycbrows and, finally, being a wacky Scous-er — surely, somewhere there exists a nonwacky Scouser - grinning ruefully. And it was, of course, rather good television.

The shot took three numbing minutes, 180 tension-racked seconds. The frame took 43 minutes in part of a session that lasted four hours. I thought the only frames that lasted 43 minutes were the ones I was playing in. Anyway, Parrott won in the end, a victory that was put down to experience and character.

All of which was quite interesting. Snooker had its golden age, of course, as it was ris-ing from obscurity to become a major sport and a national obsession. Now it has found its level as a minor major sport - better than being a major minor sport, after all - and if the players are no longer household names in most households, the sport still has its place in the national life and still makes iotriguing television.

But the snooker boom of the Eighties changed the way that we look at sport. For a start, it gave us the basic polarities of Steve Davis and Jimmy White. who had such a colossal gift for the game -"natural talent" was the preferred phrase — never win the world championship? Why did Davis - lacking such obvious gifts - win it every year?

The popular notion — that Davis was "boring" - was an obvious nonsense. Few sportsmen have spoken more interestingly about their sport than Davis. In fact. Davis's talent for analysis was not only helpful for observers, it was close to the heart of his talent. He had a "natural talent", not for potting balls but for winning snooker matches.

The fact that these two things could be separated came as a revelation to many of us. Snooker told these simple sporting truths with unprecedented vividness.

It was snooker's leisurely pace, the ability of the camera to register faces that did the job. The players' expression of self-disgust and, more revealing, sheer bewilderment as the easy pot rattles in the jaws and escapes, tells the story. Brilliance is the background: nne that shows to best advantage the error that changes the destiny of the frame, the match, the championship.

The snooker boom was an education in the vulnerability of the athlete in competition, the fear in the beart of the champion. The long moments of stillness, this being essentially a still game, told us the truth about sport, the blindingly obvious truth that we meet and encounter every sporting day: that games are not won by skill alone.

The annual excitements of the world championsbip are helped by the stressful nature of the venue. This became not so much a crucible as a Petri dish, one in which sport performs its hideous and nameless experiments on the human soul.

od always and again that cutaway to the non-player: stuck in his chair like an insect wriggling on a pin. This is always the most interesting aspect of a frame-winning break: not the soothing click and clack of the balls, drawn into their pockets, it seems, by some sort of magnetic flux, but the anguish and self-loathing on the face of the person to the person to the self-loathing on the face of the person to the self-loathing on the face of the person to the self-loathing or whom these terrible things are being done.

We see, time and again, players gnawing their nails, or pulling the most terrible faces with the complete lack of self-consciousness that only total involvement allows. Since television has cleaned up its act - they keep saying Embassy but they don't show us the players savouring the consolation of the sponsor's product — we miss the classic shot of Jimmy White: face pale, hollow, drawn and the inside of his cheeks touching as be raised his eigarette. We understand more about the nature of sport than we did 15 years ago: snooker was our futor. -

OVER the years, The Times MeesPierson Corporate Golf Challenge has come to occupy an important place in the hearts and minds of business golfers everywhere in the British Isles. From the inception of the competition in 1993, the aim of its litle sponsors has always been to enhance the season-long experience that only association with the Challenge can bring to its participants.

Everybody likes value for money, and that applies to housewife and company chief executive alike. There are credits to be won by the company golf day organiser who can prove to the boss that his cash is being well spent and, if only on that level, the Challenge would represent something of a bargain.

For their registration fee, companies are involving themselves in an event that last year saw 100,000 corporate golfers playing in it and they will also see their golf day featured in the Monday edition of The Times as part of the newspaper's sworn task of Getting Under the Skin of Sport.

That is Step One: and that is just the beginning. The leading 25 teams and ties in the 14 areas of the British Isles into which the Challenge is divided move into the regional finals, with all expenses on the day paid Step :Two. For the select band of 14 regional winners, an even greater prize awaits in the form of a spot in the national final at the La Manga Club Resort in south-east Spain, again with all expenses paid Step Three.

Step Four holds out the promise of the greatest prize of them all. The winning team over two days of national final competition will not only be crowned as 1999 corporate golf champions of the British Isles but will also have the opportunity of representing their country on a global scale in the World Corporate Golf Challenge final next year.

Teams from 38 countries are competing in this year's world final in May and there is every chance that there will be more in 2000.

Itaining Of sport

Football's chickens coming home to roost

City Olympic corruption, surely nothing the integrity of sport worldwide? Football is giving it a pretty good try.
A book, How They Stole The Game*, by the British investigative author. David Yallop, is to be released on the British market today; in it Yallop stirs the pot of Fifa, the governing body of football, under the diccatorship of João Havelange. But on June 8 last year. when Havelange was succeed-ed by his lieutenant, Sepp Blatter, as president, accusations that the succession was procured with the help of $50,000 each for votes from up to 20 African members of the

204-nation governing body In his book, Yallop has raised the tempo of these alle-gations. Indeed, unable to find a publisher brave enough to print the book in English, the writer set up his own company. Poetic Publishing, to put it on the market. And he endors-es the front cover of the book with "the book the Fifa president tried to ban".

To the chagrin of Blatter, his attempts to go to law to suppress Yallop's work are helpmg the sales. A court in Holland ruled that the book did not offend Dutch law, a Swiss judge has placed a temporary injunction on it, and, although the nub of the allegations is protectively coated with words such as "rumoured" and "alleged", the publication goes ahead tere this morning.

The hardback is a significant as ault on the integrity of Havelange and the way it claims he manipulated Fifa, which the 83-year-old Brazilian "honorary" president has boasted, has an international turnover of $150 billion.

In Brazil, some eminent soci-ologica and sports writers have exposed the wheeler-dealing of Havelange, and Ricardo Terra [eixeira, his son-in-law. who is Fifa executive committee member and president of the Brazilian Football Association. Pelé, in his tenure as Brazil's sports minister, brought out a law to curb the abuses of Teixeira, and Havelange has from the platform of Fifa. Havelange has attempted to shrug aside Yallop's book. As he has done with other journalists, myself included, he smears any attempt of analysis and any criticism by scoffing that he defeated an English-man, Stanley Rous, for the pres-idency in 1974, and the English have been making insinuations about him ever since. Yet Havelange never felt the need to go to the law to prove himself.

It was the acquiescence of a that allowed the rumours to take root. Then Lennart Johansson, president of the European football union (Uefa), and Mong-Joon Chung, son of the founder of the South Korean company, Hyundai, began to stand up to Havelange. They were unhappy about his habit of granting television contracts. which, for the next two World Cups are SwFr1.3 billion and 1.5 billion respectively, without approval or discussion by the 24-country executive.

Some of this background is missed in Yallop's book. How-ever, in printing he is braver than some of us who heard rumours, from within Fifa and outside of bribery in Paris last summer. He may be taking an enormous risk, because none of us knows of any source of proof about what was going on in the Meridien Hotel in Paris on the eve of the vote. What went on when Blatter defeated Johansson by Itl votes to 80 was clear for all to see and hear. Blatter was asked about "the Qararis brib-ing people with $50,000 in envelopes to vote for you". Blatter responded: "The match is over. the players have already gone to the changing-rooms, I will not respond to this question."

He has subsequently, and re-peatedly, insisted that where such sums did change hands, they were legitimate payments to countries in need of instant funding. There is a case for this, because almost two years before France 98. Fifa had promised all nations $1 million from television proceeds.

why these advances had to be paid in cash, and why on the eve of the vote that ensured Blatter standing for "continuity" should be president, while Johansson, offering "transpar-ency, democracy, a new road" should have lost the support that he had been promised.

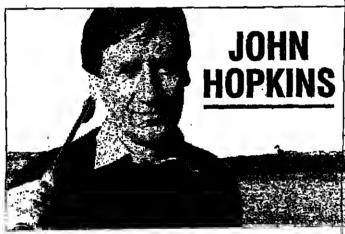

The unanswered question is

Yesterday, from his home in Sweden, Johansson repeated what he had said on the night of Blatter's victory and all that he has told Yallop on the matter of the alleged handouts. "t will say nothing about any bribes, because I know of no proof they took place. It would be a bad loser who makes such allegations without evidence."

Johansson, however, is "not against an independent inquiry into Fifa affairs. "I have told the president [Blatter] that we cannot risk what has happened to the Olympic movement. We must be seen to be clean, and if it takes an independent arbiter to look at our books, then we should open the doors. Fifa is not ours, it belongs to the world of football." *How They Stole The Game by David Yallop (Poetic Publishing, £16.99).

AND THE RESERVE

I am sure that there was plenty of banter during your match, because there always is, and I am sure there was not a whiff of cheating. You played the ball as it lay and so did your opponent. You gave him putts of 2ft and less and he did the same to you. He did not walk on your line on the green, you did not cough on his backswing and you beat him. So now you are through to the next round of the club knockout tournament. Bet the drink you had in the dubhouse before driving home tast-

You did not win your match vesterday because the referee failed to notice a knock-on, or allowed seven minutes of injury time when he should have allowed only two.

And so, miraculously we arrive at El Prat, near Barcelona, where Severiano Ballesteros was in hot water last week with other professionals competing in the Spanish Open that ended yesterday because of an octurrence in the first round on Thursday. Ballesteros, playing from light rough with your opponent again, you have on the 12th hole, hit his ball into the ing beaten him or he having van-trees that line this fairway. It was latquished you. At strokeplay, you ask him his score on each hole, if you 200 or so yards back down the jairway to play another ball. So far, so good. golfer himself and one of the strongest officials in world golf. He has never been known to waive or bend any rule for anyone, not even Ballesteros when in Spain. Indeed, Paramor has fined Ballesteros for slow play at least once and warned him for slow play at least once.

On another famous occasion at Valderrama in 1994, Paramor denied Ballesteros relief from a tricky position behind a cork tree on the 72nd hole, a ruling that virtually made sure that Ballesteros could not win the tournament. Ballesteros sought relief on the grounds that the place where his ball had ended was amidst

On this occasion, however, Paramor ruled that Ballesteros had not committed any breach of the rules. "I asked the player what he had done have been penalised two strokes.

There has to be some leeway." Paramor said. "Take the rule governing the ball hanging on the edge of the hole on the green. Rule 16-2 says a player has ten seconds for the ball lo fall into the hole, but earlier in the rule it says a player is allowed enough time to reach the hole."

As it happened, Paramor had just had to adjudicate on such a situation and he ruled in the player's favour after watching the incident on television and timing the player's walk from the ball to the edge of the hole.

"Golf is not a precise game," Paramor continued. "Supposing a player's ball has gone into a water haz-place his new ball in exactly the correct position. The key to this is that he has used his best endeavours to do it all correctly. I am happy that the player did this."

Ballesteros is the one who has to live with himself after this episode. He has to look himself in the mirror each morning. The rule is very clear," Ballesteros said. "I spoke to John Paramor and he is happy. The rest is history."

In this situation, most amateurs would not have known the rules well enough to have done anything but replace the ball accurately and, if they were found not to have done so. would either expect disqualification or would have disqualified them-

Is the conclusion of this story that amateurs should learn the rules better? It probably is. But another conclusion might be that there is one rule for amateurs and another one

From Mrs G. F. Long

Sir. I agree with Rob P ighes (April 19) about coverage the London Marathon. I switched on the television about an hour after the start and settled down to watch the parade of people doing something i could never do - and doing it for charity.

What did I get? Learned pronouncements on the "first group", the "second group" etc. I did not wish to see people running for money and I am sure many will agree with me.

Surely the Marathon was started as something that anybody could have a try at. We can watch athletic competition during the many meets that there are nowadays - and I love watching those as well but I do not want them to be mixed up. Let's get back to the idea of amateurs doing something healthful and helpful (and delightfully silly sometimes).

Punish players

From Mr E. Morley Sir. Why should the millions who do the pools, take part in bets etc suffer because either a player has an angry spell or the referee's decision to send off a player leaves an unequal contest? The only person who should be punished is the player, not the public or ream.

What if the yellow card meant an automatic fine from the player's net pay of a percentage of earnings, for example ten per cent, a red card 20 per cent and so on, until persistent offenders were paying 50 per cent or more?

EDGBASTON (Warwickshire won toss): Worcestershire Royals (4pts) beat Warwickshire Bears by 117 runs (D/L method)

IT TOOK Philip Weston, the Worcestershire opener, eight painstaking overs to score his first run, but he advanced flamboyantly to a maiden limited-overs hundred yesterday.

Weston, a powerful lefthander, made 125, with 11 lours and six sixes, from 124 balls, shared an opening part-nership of 149 in 27 overs with the forthright Pollard and worked Worcestershire into a match-winning position. With Warwickshire wobbling at 27 for two off seven overs in response to 287 for four, rain intervened for an hour, three overs shy of the 30 overs required for a result.

Warwickshire's adjusted tar-get was 231 from 29 overs. a challenge that aptly reflected how comprehensively they had been outplayed.

Pollard, released last autumn by Nottinghamshire. marked his competition debut for the Royals with 70 from 83 balls before Solanki eagerly ex-ploited the Warwickshire handicap of bowling with a slippery ball. Their third-wicket partnership was worth 49 in six overs, with Solanki contributing 32 before perishing to the second of two athletic catch-es by Knight in the deep.

In contrast to Warwickshire's slow start, Knight announced himself for the Bears with a flurry of five boundaries, but he skied a mistimed hook to short mid-wicket soon after Smith drove a catch to mid-off. The portents were poor for Warwickshire and when Leatherdale took four wickets in three overs, they

CHELMSFORD (Essex won toss): Lancashire Lightning (4pts) beat Essex Eagles by

IF ANY England player is going to capture the public imagination during the forthcoming World Cup it will be Andrew Flintoff, judging by the way that the big Lanca-shire all-rounder blitzed Essex in his only CGU National League match before reporting for national service next

Flintoff, still only 21 but built like a tank, scored 143 off 66 balls, hitting nine sixes and 15 fours with strokes of such awesome power that not only the fielders but also the umpires were often in grave physi-cal peril. Indeed, when Nigel Piews called Ashley Cowan for overstepping, it was probably the first instance of an umpire signalling a no-ball with his head tucked underneath his arm as the ball flashed past him to the boundary.

The subsequent free hit, awarded under the rules of this competition and promptly dispatched the same way, seemed entirely superfluous, since Flintoff was hitting everything with absolute freedom on his way to 50 out of 59 off 24 balls, and 100 out of 148 off 50. The second of his two sixes off Peter Such cleared the Tom

Pearce Stand and disappeared into the River Can 100 yards away. Another six off Cowan, in the over that contained the no-ball, the free hit and two more balls besides, landed on top of the hospitality tents beyond the long-on boundary. He also struck two sixes off Paul Grayson, the second which took him to his century cannoning off the same stand and endangering a field-er as it rebounded. The other four sixes came off Stuart Law. who did at least have the last word when he had Flintoff

mid-wicket.

John Crawley, the Lancashire captain, looked on in admiration from the other end, yet he was no slouch himself, making 84 off 108 balls, including eight fours, and sharing in a stand of 179 in 20 overs that lifted Lancashire to a total of 301 for six.

It seemed all too much for Essex, especially when Flintoff quickly showed that he had not finished with them. Yet, amazingly, they were within four runs of victory when their last man, Such, was run out.

Flintoff had broken an opening stand of 70 in 15 overs by having Paul Prichard caught behind for 45 in his second over. He caught Law, when he was threatening retribution with 55, and Ronnie Irani, on

He was reluctant, anyway, to use his inside knowledge against what will be his former employers so soon after leaving the post.

Hooper, who missed the start of the recent Test series by rehis son was seriously ill, has yet to give his reasons for retirement to the West Indies Cricket Board.

This is another blow to West Indies in their preparations for the World Cup. for it follows the uncertainty over whether Brian Lara, the captain, will be fit to take part because of a persistent and painful wrist injury.

"Carl will be very difficult to replace," Clive Lloyd, the West Indies manager, said, "but his absence will give somebody else a chance to show their talents. It is unfortunate because he has been an excellent play-

Llanelli in sight of the double

By GERALD DAVIES

LLANELLI have moved nine points clear at the top of the Welsh League after a comfortable win against a strangely subdued Ebbw Vale on Satur-day. Despite a midweek loss away to Neath and the unpredictability of bonus points in the offing, the Wesl Wales club now looks set to win the championship.

The competition has entered the play-off stage, with each of the four clubs involved having played two of their six matches already. Llanelli play in Pontypridd on Wednesday against the club who, without the influence of Neil Jenkins at fly half, are limping along in desultory fashion after losing their two play-off matches to date.

As has become a familiar theme throughout the years. Lianelli are also challenging for the SWALEC Cup. fdeally, they would like to have secured the league title before reaching the two remaining matches, so that some of their leading players can rest before the final against Swansea in the cup final.

Llanelli are at ease in knowing that they, along with Pontypridd, will be participating in the European Cup next season. This is not the case for Ebby Vale, who will be competing with Neath in making up the complement of five Welsh clubs in the tourna-

Richards content to delay the celebrations

BY DAVID HANDS

TO EVERY cloud, there is a silver lining. As more than 4,000 people drifted away from Heywood Road on Saturday, they were cheered by the broadcast announcement that Sale's place in the first division next season was assured after defeats elsewhere for Bedford and West Hartlepool. After the week they have had, of cost-cutting and high-profile transferlisting - with more to follow - they need to take encouragement wherever they can. Leicester had left them with none, but the champagne for the Allied Dunbar Premiership title remains firmly in the refrigerator. Not until the pocket calculator tells Dean Richards that the team he manages cannot be caught will he permit any hint of celebration, even though the points difference between Leicester and Northampton, in second place, is such that they can virtually dispense with the traw that is all they require from their remaining two matches, with Newcastle Falcons and West Hartlepool. Yet already Richards is looking ahead to a potentially-cha-otic World Cup season in which English clubs are scheduled to play Premiership matches to io and during the international circus. He ex-pects to be around a dozen players to various World Cup squads - Northampton, Bath and Sarajens will be afflicted. though not to the same extent — and werries that not only domestic honours but European qualification may have been lost by Christmas

"Someone has to look very seriously at the start of next season," kichards said, with a board neeting of English First-Division Rugby scheduled for tomorrow. Rob Andrew, his opposite number at Newcastle, is of much the same mind. Acknowledging the duty wed to the sponsors. Richardswould prefer a limited Premiership competition based on a conference system similar to that already suggested by Saracens, with a separate tournament being played while the World Cup bandwagon is in full swing.

"It's almost as though you are being penalised for breeding good players." Richards, who does not anticipate much change to his squad between now and oext season, said. Adrian Hadley, the Sale director of rugby, has helped to breed good players and is now having to dispose of them to make the books balance: Barrie-Jon Mather, the England centre, will be joined on the transfer list by three or four more players within the next ten days, some of whom did not make a powerful case for retendon by, as it were, their lack of retention of the ball. "We are doing what every club in the first division has to do," Hadley said. "The inves-tors are not prepared to lose the amount of money we have will keep the core of our squad, maybe add one or two. but we will be competitive next season." That core should include Shane Howarth, full back for Wales but fly half for his club, and Sale are optimis-tic that they can keep him from the clutches of Cardiff.

Sale have leaked tries all season, but at their best their passing is a joy and Jim Mallinder's vision creates tries such as that scored by Jos Baxendell which gave Sale so brief a lead.

Leicester created pressure on the Sale defence by running the ball at every opportunity, forwards and backs shaping a seamless game whose best expression came with David Lougheed's try in the first half. Typically, its genesis came when Sale failed to control their own lineout and Van Heerden ploughed through to take possession. The South African lock has played strongly in the second half of the season, with thoughts of a possible place in squad on his mind, and he created the impulse from which Leicester found Martin Johnson and Neil Back running in support. Lougheed received final pass and brushed aside the tast clutching hands. Leicester's enthusiasm helped Back to two tries and a tally of 13 for the season, only for the England flanker 10 find that Pat Lam's brace for Northampton prevented him becoming the division's leading tryscorer; that may be the only area in which Northampton

Falcons prey on ailing rivals

Newcastle Falcons Gloucester...

By Alasdair Reid

THE cruellest irony of Gloucester's dismal away record is that they so regularly threaten to bring it to an end. They started this Allied Dunbar Premiersbip match yester-day in typically promising fashion, manufacturing a de-lightful try for Mike Davies, the centre making his debut. after only three minutes. Thereafter, however, they were simply blown away. Newcastle were nowhere near their best in their second game in five days, but they ex-ercised an admirable degree of control. Indeed, Davies's try may have been a useful wake-up call, as Newcastle can often be desperately slow in getting into their stride.

The early jolt was a clear influence as they added thoroughness to their overall performance. Gradually they squeezed Gloucester oul of the match, overtook them on the scoreboard after balf an hour and, frankly, never looked remotely threatened.

Gloucester, after six consecutive league defeats, urgently need to strengthen their squad, a process that begins to-day when they unveil Junior Paramore, the Bedford flanker, as their newest recruit. Newcastie, as ever, were given marvellous direction by Gary Armstrong, their captain. As Steve Bates, the Newcastle coach, said, Armstrong, the Scotland scrum half, has been exemplary for Newcastle this season.

Armstrong produced a brace of tries early in the second half. Newcastle had reached the interval 18-7 ahead, through touchdowns by Mike Wood and Stuart Legg and a conversion and a penalty by Jonny Wilkinson, with Simon Mannix adding a penalty to Davies's early try. A penalty by Mark Mapletoft, who had replaced Mannix. shortly after half-time suggested that Gloucester could stage a revival until Armstrong in-

Tom Beim scored a late try for Gloucester but by that stage, with six minutes remaining. Newcastle had al-ready lifted their fool off the gas. Gloucester's impudence and George Graham completed their scoring with a lastminute try.

Saracens lose place among big six

By DAVID HANDS

THE cost of qualification for Europe is becoming more and more profound: the cost of not qualifying for Europe is even higher and that is the spectre that now stares Saracens, the big spenders of the Allied Dunbar Premiership, in the face. Defeat at Vicarage Road yesterday pushed thero out of the top six for the first time in 18 months.

The main concern for Harlequins was the sight of Zinzan Brooke, their player-coach, leaving the stadium immobilised on a stretcher after sustaining compressed vertebrae at the base of the neck in loose play. However, he completed the job when twisting for Harlequins to swamp their oppo-the New Zealander had movement in io a tackle yesterday. for Harlequins to swamp their oppo-nents. Early lack of control suggested that Saracens were short of confidence, yet they scored a try of considerable quality that should have served to setile them. Johnson ran strongly out of defence and sent Sorrell sprinting clear. Although Carling caught him, Grau and Diprose breathed life into the movement and Daniel crossed at

Sheasby and Jenkins were the next to make ground and Murphy plunged over from the ruck to give his team a 15-point advantage.

Harlequins then displayed generosity of their own. Johnson kicked a penalty after Carling's high tackle on Sorrell and neither Carling nor O'Leary (twice) could stop the flying Daniel high-stepping his way to a second try. Youngsters offer Bath hope for bright future

West Hartlepool ... By NICOLAS ANDREWS

THERE will be no sliverware for Bath this season, but third or fourth place in the league and European compedition next year is now their for the taking. Eddery gets summons from Butler

By CHRIS McGrath

COMPTON ADMIRAL, whose turn of foot in the Craven Stakes augured so well for his prospects in the Sagitta 2,000 Guineas, will have youth and experience serving his cause when he returns to Newmarket on Saturday. Yesterday, Gerard Butler, his trainer, booked Pat Eddery to replace Frankie Dettori in the classic, in which the Italian is required by Godolphin.

Paul Carberry was yesterday described as "stable" after undergoing emergency surgery on his spleen. He is expected to make a full recovery but could be out of action for two months or more. Carberry missed the ride on Bobbyjo in the Whitbread Gold Cup after being injured when riding out for Noel Meade.

whereas Eddery has just celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of the first of more than 4,000 career wins. The 11-times champion jockey, however, is still able to match the ambition of the younger man, who is seeking to give the rider of Zafonic, El Gran Senor and Lomond another Guineas success.

Though Dettori rode Compton Admiral in the Craven, Eddery was in the saddle when he showed so little respect for the reputation Killer Instinct brought to Ascot last summer. That was the main reason we went for Pat, he has ridden the horse before," Butler said after discussing various options with Erik Penser.

Compton Admiral's Swedish owner also won the Craven three years ago with Beauchamp King, who went on to give Butler his who came out best among the colts in Godolphin's three-year-old trials 16 days ago. He is among 30 horses flying in from Dubai this morning, in the wake of a preliminary draft of ten yesterday. Today's priceless cargo includes those who will be entrusted with opening Godolphin's European season at the Guineas meeting. First to put his head over the parapet is likely to be Mukhalif. He won both his starts as a juvenile when with David Loder, and confirmed how he has flourished in the desert by chasing home Island Sands in the colts' trial.

That was over a mile but he is bred to stay well and, being of the neat build that suits Epsom well, Mukhalif could be an auspicious first runner for Godolphin in the Green Ridge Newmarket Stakes on Friday's card. All running plans, however, are subject to how well each horse has travelled and adjusted to the chilly English spring.

The vacancy on the French-trained 1,000 Guineas favourite. Moiava — a headache caused by Olivier Doleuze's suspension and exacerbated by Kieren Fallon's commitment to Wince - has been filled by Richard Quinn. The jockey confirmed himself in marvellous form at Sandown Park on Saturday, persuading Generous Rosi to suspend his addiction to second in a desperate finish to the Gordon Richard Stakes. On the same card, Glamis did not remotely resemble a Derby colt in the Thresher Classic Trial, albeit on unsuitably soft ground.

Montjeu, however, owned by Michael Tabor and trained by John Hammond, is 10-1 with Ladbrokes for the Derby after winning the group two Prix Greffulhe at Long-

Just occasionally, though, the sport presents a day of atonement, a day so spectacular it dispels all fears that this precarious industry, fundamentally decent but dated and slightly dotty, may perish amoog the piranhas of modern leisure.

Whithread day at Sandown Park was a triumph. More than that, it was an education. Its enlightened programme attracted almost 20,000 people, the biggest crowd on this day for more than a decade, and held their attention for upwards of five hours. It had two key virtues, quality and variety. and while these can never be easily replicated on a rainy Tuesday at Leicester, the mix must not be regarded as unrepeatable.

Indeed, the reaction to a day that Sandown justly calls unique is that it must cease to be so, as of next year. Into the ferment that is the 2000 fixture list should be tossed a oew priority - the creation of three more weekend mixed meetings, so that two are in future scheduled at each end of the summer.

The criteria must be strict. These fixtures must be showpieces, the window displays designed to lure a new audience. No half measures. no stinting on the peripheral

Of course, Sandown has the facilities, the financial backing and an affluent catchment area. It is an enviable start. But if the 43rd year of the Whitbread card was also the best, it was because an unusually progressive committee created around the principal races an environment of entertainment rather than exclusivity.

Channel 4 set the mood at breakfast time. Its Morning Line show is never less than jaunty but it has additional animation on this all-for-one day. Jim McGrath, of reeds i Refreshed by Whitbread brew goaded by Joho Francome into telling us that 12 of the 10 Whitbread runners might as well stay at home. Eulogy was among those to attract the dismissive red pen. I wondered at that ooe.

By mid-morning, the queues had begun to grow. I spent an hour, covering a painful mile, following Richard Rowe's horsebox, Eulogy within. Made a superstitious mental note to back it.

he racecards were £2 each, which seemed steep until you opened them. They were the best I have seen, the equivalent of a decent football programme. The tipping page suggested Eulogy "looks a stand-out each-way selection at around the 16-1 mark". It all adds up, I thought, checking my wallet.

The first success of the day was the Tote challenge, in which jumping beat the Flat. Tony McCoy said he had suggested it should be a steeplechase - "I told Frankie the railway fences are very attractive" - and Philip Mitchell who supplied the horses, joked that be bad swapped the oumber-cloths, "because Frankie had been so desperate to win". Everyone, meanwhile, struck by the public response. More struck than they should have been, for this was a commercial certainty. Top jockeys are there to be promoted and at last it is being recognised. Hopefully, the lunch-time crowds for this gimmick event, and the masses of youthful autograph huoters, will persuade the most reactionary forces that starmaking is good for the health. The Whitbread was not won by a star. It was woo by Barry Fenton, so much a Nationwide League jockey that the announcer got his name wrong during the presentations, and by Richard Rove, a trainer who had saddled the pauperish sum of five winners in a season so wretched that he admitted: 'Three months ago, I wrote it off and started thinking about next

GATESHEAD Thunder broke the 30-point barrier for

seventh consecutive defeat of the JJB Super League season yesterday. The defeat increased the pressure on Andy Gregory, the Salford coach, as the league newcomers recorded a convincing 38-14 victory after

did not get on to the scoreboard until they were 28 points in arrears. The victory, Gateshead's fourth in five games, took Shaun McRae's side into seventh place in the table.

WHILE London Broncos have been losing players and matches at an alarming rate. Leeds Rhinos attended to their pre-Wembley jitters with a suitably confident display ahead of the Silk Cut Challenge Cup final on Saturday, for which they are the 8-1 odds-on favour-

From the way they went through the motions of their two previous JJB Super League games, Malcolm Reilly, the Huddersfield Giants coach, observed beforehand that Leeds "obviously have Wembley on their minds". Not yesterday, however, as the Rhinos irresistibly cut loose in the first half and kept their minds on the job. Unlike London, Leeds have the luxury of 22 fit players to choose from when the side for the cup final is announced tomorrow. No wonder Graham Murray, their coach, was smiling afterwards. "If I could have picked a game that would be good for us, this was the one. Everyone has come through with a clean bill of health." he said. Huddersfield rallied well from 30-6 down to give Leeds a handy workout in the second half. Reilly was under no illusions about London's task. "To-

Before the tidal wave, Huddersfield led when Goulding's chip to the posts bounced awkwardly for Cummins and Jim Lenihan picked up the pieces for the first of his three tries. It was the last that the Giants saw the Rhinos' line - until Lenihan's second try, early in the second half - as Leeds ran them from pillar to post in scoring six first-half tries. Huddersfield were their own worst enemies, prompting Reilly to remark that they were better at pressurising themselves than their opponents. After a penalty, the defence was sucked in by Sheridan's darting run and

Since the semi-final defeat of Bradford Bulls, Adrian Morley has been guilty, like several other Leeds players, of a drop in intensity. He, too, was back to his charging best and pow-ered over for the second try. Paul Reilly offered the occasional glimpse of his promise as an attacking full back for Huddersfield. However, a dropped pass and a missed tackle in swift succession by the youngster were costly as Daryl Powell and Marcus St Hilaire took advantage with a try each. A bout of fisticulfs between Fozzard and Fleary saw both serve ten minutes in the sinbin. Fleary was later substitut-

WITH a brush in her hand, Paula Radcliffe is to spend the next ten days decorating her flat in the French Pyrenees, but already she has had a busy spring painting by numbers. A fortnight earlier. Radcliffe had taken eight seconds off her British and Commonwealth 10,000 metres record, leading from the gun and establishing a 30-metre lead on the first lap, recording 30min 40.70sec. nate experience last year. After achieving precisely the record double that she has managed again this month. Radcliffe went into the summer with hopes high for the European championships in Budapest. However. she picked up a virus and could finish only fifth in the 5,000 metres. This summer she bopes for the "bit of luck" that deserted her last year.

10,000 metres in Seville. She holds the challengers at both distances in equal esteem. "If I am at my best and they are at their best, I am probably not going to beat them." Rad-cliffe said. "But, in the championships, it's luck on the day. I would never say I am not capable of winning.

By showing brilliant form now, Radcliffe acknowledged that she will be under greater the main summer championship. "It raises people's expectations," she said. "That happened a bit last year, but that is part of the game."

Tegla Loroupe, the women's marathon world recordholder from Kenya, won the ten kilometres at Balmoral yesterday, topping up a bank balance from which she is putting the six children of her deceased sister through private school. Loroupe's winning margin was as clear-cut as Raddiffe's, only seven days after winning the Rotterdam Marathon.

Henman

FROM ALIX RAMSAY TENNIS CORRESPONDENT IN MONTE CARLO

THERE are those, many a Briton is among them, who believe that the clay-court season is a penance to be suffered before sanity is restored and the tennis circuit rolls into Wimbledon - so it comes as something of a surprise to discover that Tim Henman, alongside Olivier Delaitre, was the only man to win a fittle outright at the Monte Carlo Open. The Anglo-French partnership took the doubles crown, beating Jiri Novak and David Rik 6-2, 6-3, while Gustavo Kuerten took the singles title when Marcelo Rios pulled out of the final after 13 games.

It marked the return of the curse of the clay courts. Last year, the two main events leading into the French Open ended with a whimper when Aler Corretja pulled out of the final in Hamburg and Albert Costa pulled out in Rome. In Italy, it was Rios who benefited, taking the winner's cheque in a walkover, but yesterday he could not overcome a pulled thigh muscle and finally threw in the towel at 4-6, 1-2 down. "Sometimes you have to lis-ten to your body," Rios said. "In a five-set match, if you can play a couple of sets it is not enough. The injury is only going to get worse and I don't want to be injured for another five months, so I have to stop."

At least the prognosis is not that bad. After spending three months waiting for a stress fracture of the lower back to heal at the start of the year Rios was relieved to find that two or three weeks rest should do the trick this time. He felt the injury first two weeks ago and then hurt the muscle again on Saturday in his semi-final against Jérôme Gol-mard. Beginning the final with heavy strapping, he had the trainer on and off the court to take the bandage off, put it back again and take it off, as he tried to find a way to play through the pain.

Twenty minutes after you lose a match like that, you feel like you have lost in the first round." Rios said, "but then you start to realise that getting to the final is not bad."

Henman would probably agree with that sentiment - a final on clay is not bad at all. especially given that he had no intention of playing doubles at all. When Delaitre was desperately searching for a partner at the last minute. Henman changed his mind and is now £50,000 richer as a result. Doubles may not be Henman's primary concern, but the chance to get a little more match play on a surface that has always caused him trouble can do nothing but good.

"I just feel much more comfortable on the court now," he said. "We are both pleasantly surprised, but from the word go we understood each other's games. Just to be practising in match conditions can only be beneficial and winning is always a good habit to be in."

Bruised Broncos remain optimistic

London Broncos18 Warrington Wolves.....30

By DAVID LAWRENSON

DESPITE witnessing his side's fourth successive defeat and seeing a succession of players leaving the field for treatment, Dan Stains, the London Broncos coach, refuses to be pessimistic about his team's chances in the Silk Cut Challenge Cup final on Saturday. When asked about the string of defeats going into the to change.

Wembley showpiece, he said: "That's neither here nor there. It would have concerned me if we had just got blown off the park, but I thought the commitment was first class."

Tries for Warrington Wolves by Alan Hunte, Lee Penny and Mark Forster were countered by scores from Mat Toshack and Tulsen Tollett and when Martin Offiah grabbed another just before half-time to give London an 18-16 lead, it looked as though their fortunes might be about

Instead, two tries from Jason Roach and one by Toa Kohe-Love killed off their challenge and Warrington thoroughly deserved their win. They played smart, aggressive football and their centre pairing of Hunte and Kohe-Love is beginning to blossom. Equally impressive was Lee Briers, orchestrating affairs from scrum half. Stains is confident that his injury worries will clear be-Wembley. However. there is still a question mark over whether Shaun Edwards seems determined to do so. but Stains will make the decision after consulting his medi-

Kingston dominated the bout and halfway through produced an immaculately timed leg throw to dump the Dutchman on his back. Kingston weighs 77kg and will now concentrate on losing four kilos for the European championships, which he won in 1996.

"Obviously I would like to win again, but I am regarding the event as a step-ping-stone," he said, "I particularly want to get a medal at the world championships to qualify for the Olympics."

easydet flights FROM £34 RETURN

Booking begins at NOON on Wednesday Zuro breaks: Nice £59 Athens £79 return SM breaks: £34 return from Scotland to London

eaders can take advantage of incredible offers on flights to ten European cities from just £34 return with easyJet. These fantastic fares, listed right, are only available on the net. Simply collect ten differently numbered tokens, eight from The Times and two from The Sunday Times. Tokens will appear every day until Sunday, May 9, 1999. You can travel between May 4 and July 15 and full details of how to book and the flights offer password will be printed on Wednesday. Don't worry if you missed yesterday's Sunday Times token, a bonus token will appear on Sunday. Attach the tokens to the booking validation form which will appear in The Times on Saturday. Readers over 18 can buy return flights for up to four people with one complete set of tokens.

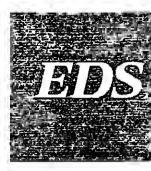

easyJet, the Web's favourite ailine, has sold almost 300,000 seats via the Internet and is currently achieving 25 per cent of sales online. More people now contact easyJet by internet than by telephone. Online bookings reduce costs by selling to customers via its Website and the consumer can consult prices on individual flights all for the cost of a local call. Stelios Haji-loannou, the easyJet chairman, said, "easyJet is definitely the Web's favourite airline, providing an easier and more cost-efficient service to consumers. People seem to be quite at ease with the internet so I am looking forward to opening the first of my chain of easyEverything Internet shops in June this year in Central London."

Despite being the National Senior Pairs Champions of England, the difference in closing date for the age qualifica-tion meant that Peter Littlewood & Graham Jepson were not old enough for the Prokom Software European Senior Pairs in Warsaw and they had to take their chances in the Open Pairs Championship. They failed to make the first cut by the slender margin of one matchpoint, but came good in the repechage, taking the last of the four final places available from the B semi-final.

They had to work hard on this deal to secure an average, as the majority of the field played the North-South cards in game and usually conceded -50.

Queen's Bench Divisional Court

Summary assessment of costs

Practice Note (Court of Appeal, Civil Division: Assessment of costs)

Following the introduction of the Civil Procedure Rules (SI 1998 No 3132) on April 26, 1999, the Court of Appeal would identify those apneals which appeared to be suitable for the summary assessment of costs and notify the parties accord-

Parties to appeals would not, costs unless they were informed by the Court of Appeal that that was propose by letter to the court that a mitable and, if the coun agreed, it would ask for statements of costs to

The Court of Appeal would, in future, be more likely than before to make orders for costs which reflected the fact that a party, while successful in general on the apneal, had been unsuccessful in rela-

Lord Woolf, Master of the Rolls, sitting in the Court of Appeal with Lord Justice Auld and Lord Justice Robert Walker, so stated in a pracoce note handed down on April 21.

THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS stated that Part 44 ("General Rules about Costs") of the Civil Procedure Rules 1998 | see Civil Procedure (Sweet and Maxwell (1999) pp 431-437) and its accompanying practice direction, did not explicitly set out the extent to which the prov sions on the summary assessment of costs applied to the Court of Ap-peal, Civil Division.

This practice note therefore outlined the approach that the Court of Appeal would be taking with regard to the summary assessment of costs from April 26.

unmary assessment of costs
Paragraph 4.3 of the direction relating to Part 44 explained (at p476) that, in first instance courts, whenever a court made an order about costs which did not provide for fixed costs to be paid, the court should consider whether to make a

The Court of Appeal fully sunported that approach as an appropriate means of disposing of costs ies quickly and openly.

However, the position was less straightforward in the Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal was therefore concerned to ensure that it operated a system which avoided putting parties to the unnecessary expense of preparing statements of costs in cases which were unsuitable for a summary assessment To achieve that aim, the Court of Appeal itself would identify those cases which appeared to be suitable for summary assessment of costs and would notify the relevant parties accordingly. Parties to appeals would not therefore need to file statements of costs unless they ere informed by the Court of Appeal that that was required.

Where the Court of Appeal in-formed the parties that it was minded to assess costs summarily, each party must prepare, file and exstotements of costs and identify any items of the other party's statement which were in dispute, giving reasons for the dispute, not less than seven calendar days before the hearing.

It should be noted, however, the fact that the Court of Appeal might have requested state-ments of costs did not place an obligation on the court to assess costs

when the parties statements of costs were available and the extent to which any items were in dispute

That could be determined only

Court of Appeal had not invited parties to file statements of costs did not prevent parties who agreed on that proposing by letter to the court that a summary assessment might be suitable, if the court agreed, it would ask for statements of court to be filed. of costs to be filed.

Although the Court of Appeal did not propose to make a summament of costs, the Court of Appeal might none the less make orders for costs which reflected the fact that a party to the application. while successful in general on the appeal, had been unsuccessful in

After April 26, the Court of Appeal would be more likely than hitherto to make orders for costs which reflected the outcome in relation to different issues.

Future review These practices would be monitored over the coming months and would be looked at again as part of the review of Order 59 of the Rules of the Supreme Court.

It was hoped that new Civil Procedure Rules and accompanying practice directions on civil appea would be implemented early in the

Budgment March 181 In cases triable only on indicament, there existed in the period between arrest and committal, a continuing duty on a responsible prosecutor i ascertain whether immediate disclosure was required in the interests of justice and fairness, in accordance with the Criminal Procee-dure and Investigations Act 1996. The Oueen's Bench Divisional Court, so held allowing an application for judio at review of the decision of the Crown Prosecution Service, on December 21, 1998, not to disclose unused material, prior to the committal for trial of Roger Lee on a charge of murder. Mr James Turner, QC and Mr James Roberts for Mr Lee: Mr Jeremy Carter-Manning, QC and Mr Christopher Kinch for the Director of Public Prosecutions.

LORD JUSTICE KENNEDY said that

I The 1996 Act considerably reduced the ability of the defence to take an active part in committal proceedings, so the need for disclosure prior to committal was also re-

2 Part 1 of the 1996 Act introduced a completely new regime in relation to disclosure. It replaced most if not all of the provisions of the common law from the moment of committal with a two-stage process set out in sections 3 and 7. The second stage only occurred in response to a delence statement. 3 The disclosure required by the 1996 Act was intended to be less extensive than would have been required prior to the 1996 Act at com-

4 Although some disclosure might be required prior to committal. and thus prior to the period to which the Act applied, it would undermine the statutory provisions if the pre-committal discovery were to exceed the discovery obtainable after committal pursuant to the

5 The 1996 Act did not specifically address the period between arrest and committal, and whereas in most cases prosecution disclosure could wait unti) after committal without jeopardising the defend-ant's right to a fair trial the prosecufor must always be alive to the need to make advance disclosure of material of which he was aware, either from his own consideration of the papers or because his anention had been drawn to it by the defence, and which he, as a responsible prosecutor, recognised should be disclosed at an earlier stage.

Examples canvassed before (a) previous convictions of a complainant or a deceased if that information could reasonably be expected to assist the delence when apply-

(b) material which might enable defendant to make a pre-commital application to stay the proceedings as an abuse of process; (c) material which might enable

the defendant and his legal advisers to make preparations for trial which would be significantly less effective if disclosure was delayed, for example, names of eye witnesses whom the prosecution did not intend to use.

6 Any disclosure by the prosecution prior to committal would not normally exceed the primary disclosure which after committa would be required by section 3 of the 1996 Act, that is, disclosure of material which in the prosecutor's opinion might undermine the case for the prosecution.

However, to the extent that a defendant or his solicitor chose to reyear what he would normally only disclose in his defence statement the prosecutor might in advance the secondary disclosure which such a revelation would trigger, so whereas no difficulty would arise in relation to disclosing mate-

Although the 1996 Act had not abolished pre-committal discovery the provisions of the 1996 Act taken as a whole were such as to require that the common law obligations in relation to the pre-committal penod be radically recast in the way his Lordship indicated.

8 Within the framework outlined, his Lordship accepted Mr Turner's submissions that even before committal a responsible prosecutor should be asking himself what if any immediate disclosure, justice and fairness required him to make in the particular circumstances of the case.

Very often the answer would be none, and rarely if at all should the prosecutor's answer to that continuing piece of self- examination be the subject matter of dispute to this court. If the maner did have to be ventilated it should, save in very exceptional circumstances be before a irial judge.

Mr Justice Blofeld agreed. Solicitors: Clarke Kiernan, Tonice, Maidstone

are unnecessary. However, there still re-

Tomorrow's trade data, in particular, are likely to provide a firm reminder that with the pound remaining at stubbornly high levels, the deficit will continue to act as a substantial drag on the economy for some time. MMS International, the economics consul-tancy, forecasts that while the global trade gap in February will narrow from the January record of £2.8 billion, it is set to remain at high levels of £2.3 billion. The non-EU trade deficit is poised to widen again to about £1.8 billion, suggesting that the trend of large deficits is likely to continue.

Also on Tuesday, the Confederation of Briosh Industry will release its March industrial trends survey. The last couple of surveys have pointed to a modestly improving trend in the sector. Analysts are look-ing for a bigger bounce-back in March as evidence that manufacturers may return to growth during the second half of this year.

Abroad, the main focus of interest will be

US first-quarter GDP figures on Friday. The heady 6.0 per annualised rate recorded at the end of last year has sparked fears that the Federal Reserve will be forced to raise rates. Slower first-quarter growth - MMS fore-casts an annualised rate of 3.2 per cent -

pected to rise from 0.8 per cent to 1.3 per cent.

WH SMITH: The recent strong performance in the share price owes more to the group's involve-ment in the internet than to any riews on current trading. Since the start of the year, the price has risen from a low of 477p to close on Friday at 728%p. Even so, the Internet Bookshop, which it bought last year for almost £10 million, is only likely to contribute £6 million to overall sales, al-beit double the £3 million achieved last time.

SG Securities is forecasting a profits setback when interim numbers are published on Thursday. It is forecasting pre-tax profits of £98 million, which compares with a pro forma £128 million last time. The results will reflect the downturn in economic activity on world markets, such as Latin America and Russia. Germany and Italy will also have provided

He is forecasting a drop in pretax profits from £50 million to £26.2 million, but remains hopeful that the dividend will be maintained at 4.7p.

Arcadia was the first of the big retailers to highlight the problems faced on the high street, so brokers will be paying close attention to any comments on current trading from the management. Mr Thomas expects sales densi-ty to be down about 2 per cent

1,000 points if he went. "Absolute baloney," he says, adding that the last time there was fevered talk of his departure, the Dow fell by all of two points. Mr Rubin has breakfast or lunch weekly with Alan Greenspan and Larry Summers. Deputy Treasury Secretary and his likely successor. The meetings have been characterised by Time magazine as "the committee to save the world". Mr Rubin prefers to portray them as slightly geeky affairs. "Most people don't find things like yield curves amusing we have all kinds of jokes about the yield curve," he says.

Mr Rubin's part in cutting the US budget deficit has been crucial to the Clinton Administration's economic success. He has also been praised for persuading Western banks to reschedule Korean debt in 1997, stopping a messy default. Mr Rubin says that the world's financial crisis is not over, but dodges questions on the sustainability of US economic growth, since any comment is likely to be over-interpreted.

Huge gains on Wall Street have fostered greed, envy and a guilty fear that a bubble is about to burst. The Rubin factor is one more possible trigger.

Unigate, the food and dairy group chaired by Ian Martin, has offered 125p a share, or £228 million, for the business. Terranova is today expected to issue a hard-hitting defence of its plan to stay independent. It is also thought that if Unigate decides to raise its of-claimed its place on the list of wonder stocks of 1999. By mid-April, its shares had risen nearly 100 per cent in value since the beginning of the year to the dizzy heights of nearly £16. Of course, it is Freeserve, the free Internet access service Dixons launched late last year, rather than its retail business, that has spurred the share price. Dixons has now asked its bankers, Credit Suisse First Boston, and Cazenove & Co. the brokers, to look into a multibillion pound flotation of Freeserve. They could come up with a valuation of somewhere between £2 billion and £3 billion.

The wind has rather been taken out of the Dixons sails in the past fortnight. Doubts about how to achieve a fair valuation of Freeserve, which is set to break even only this year and to make a small profit next year, plus the stalling of the Wall Street technology stock rally, knocked its share price off its peak. But those who bought at the beginning of the year will still be flush.

If Freeserve were somehow to be split off from Dixons. through a partial sale, flota-con or joint venture, it would have the benefit of giving the market a chance to evaluate the core retailing business properly. It is doing well, but the fuss over Freeserve has left it in the shadows.

John Clare, group chief executive, points out that, although there has already been a huge share price spike this year, the group has actually been on a reasonably steady upward curve since 1994. Windfall spending from building society conversions gave a huge boost to sales two years ago. and they subsequently fell back. Since then, trade has gone back on to a smooth upward track.

The turning point for Dixons's fortunes came when it sold its American retailing business in 1993, six years after buying it. Silo, or Your Electronic Superstore, as it was renamed, was an unmitigated disaster for Dixons. Mr Clare remembers it as a "night-

Withdrawing from the States cost Dixons £300 million in all, and a great deal of credibility. Since then, Dixons has not made any overseas acquisitions, except in the Irish Republic. "When we came back from America, we had our tails between our legs and said we'd focus back on the UK. The strategy has delivered." Mr Clare says.

CORPORE PROFILE Dixons

Sir Stanley Kalms, chairman, left, and John Clare, chief executive, have seen shares in Dixons, the electrical retailer, reach nearly £16 this year, boosted by Freeserve, the free Internet access service that was launched last year. With the growth in Internet stocks, Dixons is now considering floating Freeserve big step away from the British high streets and retail parks for Dixons. Its success could encourage other such strategic leaps and this could lead to some expansion overseas America was a failure, and if Dixons were to try expanding in western Europe, it would quickly come up against Kingfisher, which has a large European electricals business built around Darty. the French market leader, and Cornet in the UK. Dixons and Kingfisher went through a period, ten to fifteen years ago, when their fates were closely intertwined. Dixons made a £1.8 billion bid for Kingfisher in 1986, when it was still named Woolworth Holdings. When that failed. by way of consolation, Dixons bought Silo. Spotting that the acquisition had been a mistake. Kinglisher struck back with a £568 million hostile bid in 1989.

mires, but Dixons was in no position to do so at the time. Looking at the Dixons position in the UK, there is little doubt that markets are going in its favour. Lots of new hitech products are coming on to the market in the next three vears, while others will move into the mainstream. Great things are expected of such things as digital television, mini-discs and DVD.

"In the early Eightles there was a technology bandwagon, From the second half of the Eighties there was nothing new. We are now standing at the edge of an era when we will get growth," Mr Clare says.

Verdict, the retail consultancy, believes that Dixons, the market leader in the UK. should be a beneficiary of the explosion in new products, as it has a format to match each growth area. In personal computers it has PC World, in telecommunications it has The Link, in games it has @Jakarta. Sir Stanley Kalms, whose father founded Dixons with a photographic studio in 1937, is still chairman of the company, and remains as enthusiastic about new developments as ever, Now aged 67, he works out of the Dixons central London office, while Mr Clare runs the group from the Hemel Hempstead headquarters.

When Sir Stanley took Dixons on to the London Stock Exchange in 1962 it was still a photographic business, with ló branches, It was not until five years later that Japanese audio and hi-fi units appeared in the Dixons range. Expansion continued, and in 1984 the Currys Group was acquired. It added 613 retail outlets to the group, together with Mastercare, the electrical appliance service organisation.

that it has overcome its American mistake to become phenomenally successful, the stock market loves it to pieces, but the general public does not. Customers flock to Dixons shops, but on the whole have not taken them to their hearts.

Mr Clare acknowledges this, but says that Dixons is doing its best, and has to cope with some formidable difficulties. He admits: "I'd like to establish a reputation and image with the consumer that is better than the one we've got. We're the best regarded in the sector, but not as highly regarded as other sectors.

products. We sell products that go wrong and that people have difficulty in understanding." Although staff turnover is not bad for the sector, at about 20 per cent per annum, the churn of sales staff can cause problems.

As so many of the products sold by Dixons involve servicing at some point, it also sells extended warranties. It is always chary of saying how warranties - another factor that has aroused public mis-

Customers are also constantly suspicious that Dixons' prices are unfairly high. Despite the company's proteslations that it operates on very low margins. Peter Mandelson, when he was Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, drew the Office of Fair Trading's attention to accusations that Dixon's was overpata col fical e gravith

Dixons and the OFT have had one meeting to discuss the issue. and nothing more has been said. There is no inquiry, but nor is there anything to say that the company has been exonerated Given the Government's enthusiasm for defending the rights of the consumer, there seems a reasonable chance that the competition regulators will eventually turn their full attention to the electricals market, particularly personal computers.

Dixons has certainly built itself a very strong position with-in its markets. Verdict reckons that it has grown its share of the entire electricals market from 17.3 per cent in 1994 to 27 per cent. The move by Asda and Tesco into electrical retailing has had no noticeable impact, and Mr Clare is confident that neither supermarket operator actually makes mon-ey on it. "Electrical retailing is a very easy market in which to secure sales, but it is very difficult to make money," he says.

Integrity Works praised Dixons" long-established and progressive approach to ethical expression," adding: "Starting at the top and through its sponsorship of a chair in business ethics, it has spelt out that in its view 'good business begings and ends with integrity."

Crisp Consulting said that Sir Stanley's pay of £850,000 a year is well under par for his long experience, and the other directors are paid reasonably.

Crystal Palace's Goldberg loses £7m as companies are liquidated spurs technology firms

By Jason Nissé

MARK GOLDBERG, the 35-year-old computer recruitment entrepreneur who presided over the collapse of Crystal Palace football club, has lost more than £7 million in a series of business ventures that have been placed into liquidation in the past few weeks. In addition to losing an estimated E22 million when Crystal Palace went into administration last month, Mr Goldberg has suffered huge losses in a series of badly run business ventures. The losses incurred by Mr

Goldberg this year will have more than wiped out the money that he made from selling a 12 per cent stake in MSB International, the recruitment firm that he founded, for £23.8 mil-

Mr Goldberg is almost certain to sell his remaining million shares in MSB in the next few weeks. MSB shares rose 29p to 2201/sp on Friday, ahead of the company reporting its full-year results tomorrow.

The figures are expected to show MSB thriving without Mr Goldberg - who resigned from the company last July and reporting profits, before exceptional costs and tax, of various sports management companies.

All in all, eight companies controlled by Mr Goldberg have been placed in liquidation over the past seven weeks. These include Data Scanning. a technology start-up venture. Lands Development Corporation, a property company, and companie The liquidators, David Rubin and Partners, estimate that Mr Goldberg has lost E7.3 million in these ventures. The losses of other creditors are estimated at between £1.8 million and £2 million, and the Inland Revenue and Customs and Ex-

Mr Rubin said that it appears that the companies had been "run by remote control". He said that Mr Goldberg had been "astonishingly naive for a businessman" The losses this year do not represent the first time that

Mr Goldberg has been in financial difficulty. In 1991 he presided over the collapse of two ventures - MSB Appointments (London), which was liquidated with a deficit of £873,000, and Aquamarine Hotel (Brighton), which had a deficit of £306,000.

As a result of this, Mr Goldberg faced bankruptcy over debts he had incurred totalling El.07 million. He agreed an Individual Voluntary Arrangement (IVA) with his creditors, by which they were paid only £30,000 to clear his debts.

This IVA was disclosed in the prospectus for MSB's flotation, but is not well known. Simon Paterson, of Moore Stephens Booth White, administrator of Crystal Palace, admitted that he was not aware of the IVA when he took on the appointment at the First Divi-sion football club, but that he had since been told about it. He is working on a plan to re-structure the club's finances so that it can resume combat in the First Divison next season. Mr Goldberg — who last week charged Crystal Palace fans £5 each to attend a public meeting about the club and has hired a bodyguard - was unavailable for comment.

Search for top valuation to look for US listings By CHRIS AYRES

MANY of Britain's fastestgrowing technology companies are considering abandoning their homeland to float on the Nasdaq stock market in the US, authoritative research out today shows. The research, carried out by Deloitte & Touche, the chartered accountants, to find Britain's 50 fastest-growing technology companies, found that many businesses felt they would achieve significantly higher valuations in the US than in London.

Deloitte's findings will once again highlight the relative lack of financial research into the technology sector in Brit-ain, and the reluctance of British investors to embrace high-risk, high-reward ventures. in spite of this, however, Deloitte found that London markets were slowly becom-ing more attractive to technology companies, thanks to the increasingly high profile of businesses such as Freeserve, the free Internet access company expected to join the London stock market this summer.

At the top of Deloitte's Fast

50 list is Eidos, the computer games company behind the hit title Tomb Raider, which is currently being made into a Hollywood film.

Eidos was founded in 1990 by Simon Streater, a former Ministry of Defence software engineer, and turned into a commercial success by Jan Livingstone, one of the founders of the Games Workshop retail chain, and Charles Cornwall, a South African corporate financier. The company, which is quoted on Nasdaq as well as in London, achieved astonishing sales growth of 29,637 per cent between 1995 and 1997. Io second place is Data Discoveries, an Edinburgh software company, which saw sales grow by 7,117 per cent during the same period. The company produces business software that can confirm the names and addresses of cus-

Data contradict official earnings growth figures

By Alasdiar Murray, economics correspondent

FRESH doubts about the pace of earnings growth emerged to-day with new data showing that wage deals in both the manufacturing and service sectors slowed sharply in the first

The findings contradict the official average earnings data published last week and are likely to reopen the debate about the accuracy of the official data, which were only rein-stated last month after a fourmonth suspension.

The Confederation of British Industry pay bank shows manufacturing pay growth falling to 3.0 per cent in the three months to March 1999 compared with 3.1 per cent in the last quarter of 1998. Service sector wage growth also eased lower, falling to 3.6 per cent in the first quarter compared with 4.4 per cent in December 1998.

In contrast, the official figures showed annual wage growth climbing to 4.6 per cent in the three months to February, after 4.5 per cent in January.

The ONS blamed the "exceptional" revision on an unex-pected late surge of corporate returns. Large bonus payments also seemed to have pushed the overall figures up-wards with the annual growth in February alone placed as high as 5 per cent. Many City analysts seized on the data as evidence that the Bank should now call a halt to its rate-cutting spree. The Bank has repeatedly said that earnings growth above 4.5 per cent is incompatible

Recent minutes from the Monetary Policy Committee have suggested, however, that the Bank is still not fully convinced of the accuracy of official data and still places high importance on other pay surveys such as the CBI's and its own pay databank. The CBI said its survey, although the most comprehensive of its kind, was not directly comparable to the official data. It includes a bonus element only if changes to bonus

HONG KONG has seen an explosion of CD piracy since the handover of the colony to China, according to Chris Smith, the Culture, Media and Sport Secretary, who is leading a top-level delegation of British television, film and record industry executives to mainland China and Hong Kong this week. He believes Hong Koog. Macao and Eastern Europe are now the worst areas of the world for CD and software piracy. Before handover an estimated 60 million CDs a year were pirated in Hong Kong. One re-cent seizure involved 22 mil-lion CDs and the capacity of the Hong Kong industry is now one billion CDs a year although not all are counterfeit.

The Culture Secretary hopes to persuade the Hoog Kong authorities to involve the police as well as Customs officials in stamping out pira-cy. Mr Smith will also raise the issue of piracy with the Chinese Government in Beijing because of high levels of

SB enlists Bristol-Myers to aid new drug's sales drive

BY PAUL DURMAN

SMITHKLINE BEECHAM has brought in Bristol-Myers Squibb, the large US pharmaceutical group, to help it to make a success of Avandia, its new diabetes treatment. Bristol-Myers will sell Avandia in the US alongside SB to encourage a rapid take-off of the potential blockbuster seen as vital to the British company's growth. Advisers to the US Food and Drug Adminmended on Thursday that Avandia be approved for treating adult-onset diabetes, a problem for almost 15 million Americans.

Bristol-Myers already sells Glucophage, the leading diabetes treatment, whose fastgrowing sales reached $282 million in this year's first quarter. SB, which has more than 3,000 US sales representatives, believes that Bristol-Myers will help it to "get the

France pressing for Elf and Total tie-up

FROM ADAM SAGE IN PARIS

THE FRENCH Government but analysts say he may be is pressing for a merger be- whistling in the wind. "Agip tween the French oil grants Elf-Aquitaine and Total-Fina.

The Socialist-led Government believes that a Gallic national merger may be the only way to avert the sale of Elf either to Shell or to Italy's Agip.

Speculation about Elf has been fuelled by reports that Mark Moody-Stuart, Shell's chairman is pondering a bid. He has been asking pension funds owning about 55 per cent of Elf whether they would back a hostile offer. Jérôme Jaffré, Ell's chairman, favours a link with Agip, and Elf are pretty much same and it is always difficult to succeed in a merger between equals," Jean-Jacques Limage, an EIFB analyst, said.

Elf profits last year fell by about a third to Fr3.5 billion (E350 million) on turnover 17 per cent down at Fy211 billion.

The Government, which retains a golden share in Elf, wants to "save" the company through a merger with Total - which last year announced purchasing the Belgian Petrofina - but senior managers say their cultures differ too much.

Housing boom is not inevitable

ing market is at the centre of disputes about the outlook for the British economy. Some forecasters are suggesting that we are in for another housing boom. Mosi strikingly, stories abound of City whiz-kids who, in former times, would blow a large part of their bonuses on a Porsche, now buying London property to rent. I am not sure how that leaves you, but it does not exactly fill me with confidence.

Support for a strongly bullish view of the housing market can certainly be found in selected comparisons with previous experience. According to FPD Savills, the property consultancy, after the latest rate cuts, mortgage payments have fallen to 15 per cent of the average household's disposable income. The histurical average is 25 per cent. while at the end of 1989, the proportion was a staggering 45 per cent. In other words. taking account of the level of both house prices and interest raies, property is now more affordable rhan it has been for decades. Therefore. you might think, it must be a raging buy and the boys with the Porsches have gnt it right ty" is very odd. I do not know about Porsches, but the average car is more affordable than ever, so is the average can of baked beans. But if I were you, I would not set out to build up stocks of either in anticipation of a sharp rise in prices. The notion that this is a way of assessing the housing market derives from the idea that the demand for housing is always financeconstrained, that is to say, you would always seek to put more into housing if only you could raise the money.

This was indeed a rough description of the housing markel in the not-too-distant past. Until the mid-1980s, huusing finance was rationed and there was considerable pentup demand. Moreover, the combination of high inflation and favourable lax treatment for housing means that it was advantageous to put as much money into property as you could. Accordingly, if lower interest rates reduced the mortgage hurden, it seemed sensible to increase the size of the mortgage. But that game came to an end with a bung when the raging boom of the late-1980s sent house prices to such levels that thereafter they had to fall, and sky-high interest rates broke many a psychology undermined the relevance of "affordability". In the Eighties, people did not envisage that they would go on paying out 30 or 40 per cent of their disposable incomes in mortgage payments forever. Rather, they believed that rapidly rising incomes would quickly reduce that percentage, while house prices would continue to rocket, giving them the chance, at some point over the rainbow, to cash in their chips and live on the proceeds. Once you take away that perception, the relevance of historical comparisons of "affordability" is sharply reduced.

You reach the same conclusiun if you focus on real rather than nominal interest rates. On the face of it, interest rates, including mortorrower. gage rates, are extremely The subsequent change in low. But once you take acand changes in tax treatment, they are not low at all. Indeed, they are higher than they have been for much of the last 30 years. Another widely watched

dearness of houses is the ratio of the average house price to average earnings, or if you like, the number of years of gross earnings the average person would have to pay to secure the average house. I prefer this ratio to measures of "affordability" because it is not distorted by misleading changes in the level of nominal interest rates. At the peak of the 1980s boom, the ratio reached 5.5, but the average over 30 years is about 3.8. It is standing at that level now. This suggests that although houses are not expensive, neither are they particularly cheap. It supports the view that, unless the market takes leave of its senses, house prices are likely to rise only mod-

This is another contrast with the late 1980s - the market will not be allowed to take leave of its senses. If house prices were to take off then this would threaten unacceptable implications for inflation. Accordingly, the Monetary Policy Committee would

The one set of conditions in which I could envisage house. prices taking off would be if the MPC no longer had its eye on inflation. Moreover, there is one plausible circumstance in which this could happen. Suppose that the Government gets serious about preparing Britain for the euro and decides to target a level for the exchange rate of the pound.

erocodile is the sym-bol of the Royal Bafokeng Nation. And by South African tradirion a crocodile can break down stone walls when it is roused. A more recent legend, which raises a smile in Juhannesburg wine bars, concerns a crocodile subjugating an impala. These days the Bafokeng is jokingly referred to as "a tribe of lawyers". But the Bafokeng is not so much a tribe of lawyers. as a tribe of businessmen. It is led by its kgosi — or king — the 34-year-old, American-educated Lebone Mulotlegi II. He has speni nearly a decade fighting Impala and its backers. Gencor. the South African conglomerate. through the courts. At stake were the revenues from four platinum mines (evocatively named Impala I and II, and Wildebeesten I and III located on Bafokeng land, which stretches from the dusty lown of Rustenberg to the southern borders of the Sun

City holiday complex. The deal, struck a few weeks ago, gives the Bafokeng a stake in Impala, a myalty of about 22 per cent of the mines' revenues and a sear on the £500 milliun company's board for the kgosi. It also guarantees how much Impala will mine, how it treats its workers and the local environment and gives the Bafokeng an important say in whether Impala strikes the assei swap ii wanis io do with Lonmin, the British group formerly known as Lunrho.

However, the issues raised by the Bafokeng's agreement with impala go deeper than a scamof platinum, reaching to the core of how South Africa's giant mineral wealth is divided between the tribes who have lived there fur centuries and the white settlers who arrived on the gold. diamond and platinum-rich areas less than 200 years ago. The

Johannesburg business community is split between those who think this is a landmark in the banle for native land rights, or a une-off brought about by tenacily, good luck and the foresight of an African king who was born nearly 180 years ago. Sitting in his office, with its oak-panelled walls and a stuffed leopard by his desk, the kgosi

certainly pays tribute from the Batokeng's unique position to his great, great grandfather who was simply known as Mokgatte. He ruled the Bafokeng which can trace its history back to the 12th century - for 50 years from around 1834. The tribe came to live on its century - about the same time as the Cape province was setiled by the Dutch. The Bafokeng lived peacefully until the Zulu uprising uf the early 1820s, when it was anacked by renegade Zulu warriors, led by the chief Mzilikazi. Here luck intervened: the Bafokeng found themselves an unlikely ally in the Boer "Voortrekkers" who had ventured north to set up a new republic in the Transvaal. Mzilikazi, who himself was on the run from Shaka, the fearsome Zulu leader, altacked the Boers. Realising it was better to make friends against a common enemy rather than fight on two fronts.

Paul Kruger, banded together. Kruger gave the young Mogkatle some invaluable advice: if you want in keep your land, you have to buy the title deeds. Mogkatle sent 50 of his men to Kimberley, where they worked in the newly established diamond mines, raising enough money for the Bafokeng to buy the 1.200 square kilometres it now owns.

This ownership started to become important when plaunum was found in the 1920s. However, it was not until the 1960s that mining started in earnest. A prospecting agreement was signed between Geneor and the Bajokeng in 1966, and there were a series of other deals between the Gencor. its subsidiary, Impala, and the Bafokeng. But the key deal which led in the Bafokeng's legal action was struck in the 1980s. As part of South Africa's policy, while apartheid sull operated. of creating "independent" homelands within the country. the Bafnkeng found themselves part of Bophuthatswana. The homeland's president. Lucas Mangope, was jealous of the Balokeng's mineral wealth and pressurised the father of the current kgosi. Lehone Molotlegi I. 10 give up the rights. He resisted, but was forced into exile in Botswana and, while he was away. Mangope signed away

When Mangape was deposed.

the Bafokeng first tried to have the deal with Impala changed. And when that legal action failed, it went back to court to have the whole agreement ruled invalid, claiming President Mangope had exceeded his powers. impala claimed it was not going to budge. Steve Kearney, Impala's managing director, said: "We have a strong legal position, having entered a legitimate business deal."

In the end the market, sensing a legal battle could put Impala under pressure from predators. forced the mining group's hands. "The settlement anempts to meet the aspirations of the Royal Balokeng Narion without diminishing value for Impala

It has purchased the shopping centre in the local town of Phokeng, which it is redeveloping, has invested in a brick-and-tile factory and struck a joint venture with Mobil for distribution of lubricants. The latest project is a sports complex with a 50,000-seat football stadium.

Paul

good thing, of course. When the good thing in question is as deeply serious as The Life Peer Formerly Known as Melvyn. that point can arrive surprisingly quickly. Even so, he was an excellent host on The Sundays, Channel 4's Saturday night guide to the following morning's papers. However plodding some of his presenong may be, Lord Bragg is e deft and astute chairman of group discussions. This was what was needed to juggle a panel of opinionated hacks, writers and comics, such as Francis Wheen, Howard Jecobson or Linda Smith. and the formula worked a treat. But for the new series he has been replaced by a deranged young Scot called Alan Tyler.

EXCITING FUN! He thinks it is featured prominently on this his duty to cut across the profile of the President of Yugoslehis duty to cut across the panellists, usually to SHOUT SOMETHING COMPLETELY STUPID. He puts the "thick" in thick Scottish accent. Heavens preserve us. HE THINKS HE'S THE NEXT CHRIS EVANS!

The panellists blinked gently and tried to carry on as if they weren't being hectored by the loony in the Tube compartment, but you could see it was hard going. At the end we learnt of the breaking story that Zoran Djind-jic, a Serbian opposition politician, has spoken out against Slobodan Milosevic's conduct in Kosovo. As the last prominent Yugoslav to do this, the journalist Slavko Curuvija, was promptly shot dead, this must have taken courage.

This update was of particular interest to anyone who had seen Correpondent: Sloba and Mira on BBC2 earlier in the evening, as both Djindjic and Curuvija

Documentary makers always take the risk that their work will be overtaken by events. The reporter Phil Rees and the production team must have felt this acutely as the potential lessons of their carefully assembled meterials were blown apart by the first cruise missile. What was doubtless intended as e sober warning, became a chastening explanation of why Nato's strategy has gone so awry.

ne image stood out - the skulls of Serb warriors decapitated by their Muslim oppressors embedded in niches in a medieval church wall. A deep and violent sense of ancient injustice and unrighted wrongs, bitter grievances ossified into symbols and nurtured over centuries these has been the fuel of Slobodan Milosevic's rise to power, remorseREVIEW

lessly pushed by his wife Mira. Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos, Bill and Hillary Clinton, Neil and Christine Hamilton - the pairing of the amoral opportunist and the driven ambitious wife is an archetype. Their schoolmates called Sloba and Mira "Romeo and Juliet", so cloyingly were they de-voted to each other, but they turn out to be more like the Macheths.

Both are tormented by private phosts. His uncle, father and mother all committed suicide. Her mother betrayed her partisan comrades under Gestapo torture, an offence for which her father, Mire's granddad, personally shot her.

The most worrying underlying message was that they were funda-mentally unstable, ruthless and operating outside the norms of radonal, decent behaviour. Her ambioon for him is all-consuming, and she is known to dominate his political will. He is, by this account, a hollow opportunist and together they have spun a spider's web of political and financial corruption.

You could dismiss this as Nato propaganda, except that the witnesses included many impor-tant former friends and allies whom the couple have manipulated or betrayed. Above all we were shown that Sloba and Mira heve always used external conflict to bolster their position. At a time when their grip might have been weakening, the cluster bombs have fallen like menna from heaven.

Being relatively new to this job. and working from home, I have spent very little ome in the offices of The Times and have never met the Editor, Peter Stothard, the subject of Nick Danziger's profile in The Establishment (Channel 4. Saturday). So I watched with a mix-ture of rubber-necking fascination and some apprehension in case the programme showed my employer in an unexpectedly bad light.

ilmed ecross the furore over the serialisation of Gitta Sereny's book on the child-murderer Mary Bell, the film might have laid the Editor open to some uncomfortable criticisms. In the event I would be surprised if he wasn't rather pleased with a portrait that proved to be respectful and appreciaove.
The only dissenong voices came from the mother of Mary Bell's victim ("All this is about money" and the veteran letter writer Captain Kimm, who thought the paper had behaved hypocriocally ("Shame on you all!"). Danziger's technique of running the commentary over black-and-white stills lent an air of gravitas and the programme ended with the satisfection of a big scoop, obtained by completely ethical means.

I enjoy Roger Cook's exposes. There is something about the inevitability of it ell. Cook's tone of shocked indigneoun, the secret films, the "Gotcha!" denouements, that border on the comical.

Locks. Stocks. Burglars and Fences (ITV. Priday) was gratifyingly true to form, with the interfering old agent provocateur setting up, inter alia, a formidable lady burglar and a bent jeweller. Maybe all police work should be conducted like this, with the cost of operations being covered by advertising revenue.

World awaits reforms to hold crises in check

By Anatole Kaletsky -

MAJOR reforms of the global financial system, designed to contain future crises such as the ones that have hit Asia, Latin America and Russia, are due to be approved this week at meetings of the Group of Seven and the IMF.

Finance ministers and central bank governors gathering in Washthat they are close to agreement on most of the key measures to strengthen the "global financial architecture" proposed in the wake of the Russian crisis by Gordon Brown, the Chancellor.

The reforms, due to be approved in principle this week but implemented only gradually from the autumn onwards, fall into six broad categories: ☐ A new "contingent credit line" ington over the weekend indicated (or CCL) will be created to stop the spread of financial contagion. arranged credit lines, but also by Countries that submit their economic policies to prior approval by the IMF will be guaranteed large credit facilities with almost no strings attached and available immediately to protect themselves against attacks by international speculators. The CCL scheme will potentially be backed not only by the IMFs $76 billion (£47 billion) of uncommitted

the possibility of additional parallel lending from the treasuries and central banks of the G7.

The IMF will formally adopt a new attitude to economic management designed to create "sustainable exchange rate regimes". It will discourage developing countries from basing policies on fixed exchange rates. Countries will instead be encouraged to adopt floating or adjustable exchange rates, except in the small number of cases. such as Hong Kong and Argentina. where governments are willing and able to adopt currency boards.

□ New codes on financial supervision and monetary management will be designed to improve surveillance over speculation by banks and hedge funds. Central banks in the G7 countries will also be expected to operate in a more transparent

sions if developing countries default. This may require changes in English and New York law. ☐ New efforts will be made to protect the poorest people in developing countries from global financial crises. The IMF and World Bank will be told to redesign adjustment programmes to give higher priority to social safety nets.

☐ The poorest developing nations will be given additional relief from their unsustainable debt burdens. While these principles have now been broadly agreed. Germany and Japan are still reported to be obstructing detailed agreement. The programme will also disappoint advocates of granting complete debt relief to the pooorest countries.

BT in £1.2bn deal to buy Japan stake

By Raymond Snoddy, media editor

American Telephone & Telegraph (AT&T). its worldwide partner, are 10 spend £1.2 bil-lion 10 take a 30 per cent stake in Japan Telecom, a long-distance carrier.

The deal, announed yesterday, pushes ahead with the strategy of building a global network by taking significant minority stakes in foreign tele-

Taking the stake in Japan Telecom, which BT believes is the third-largest telecoms play-er in the $100 billion a year Japanese market, is a final recognition that the UK company is unlikely to be able to invest in the domestic business of NTT. Japan's dominant national operator.

Under the deal signed yesterday in Tokyo. BT and AT&T will each subscribe for 15 per cent of the shares in Japan Telecom which has built a fibreoptic network running along the routes of Japan Railways. BT is putting up most of the money and will have an economic interest of 20 per cent in the venture compared with AT &T's 10 per cent. But the two companies will jointly manage their investment.

BRITISH TELECOM and were set because the largest investor in the company is Japan-nese Railways East with 15.1 per cent. This status will be preserved.

BT is investing about £620 million in cash in the venture and AT&T, its partner in a $10 billion (£0 billion) global joint co-operation, will put up about £130 million. The balance of the £1.2 billion investment will come in the form of BT and AT &T businesses in Japan which will be integrated with Japan Telecom. These include BT Communications Services.

Sir Peter Bonfield, BT's chief executive, said yesterday that, when BT entered the Japanese market in 1985, the aim was to become a strong force in the world's second-largest telecoms market after the US.

"This deal will allow Japan Telecom to become the number one challenger in Japan." Sir Peter said. According to BT, Japan Telecom. which so far has about 17 million customers as well as interests in mobile operators with six million subscribers, comes after NTT and KDD.

Others contend that Japan Telecom also lags behind IDC, in which Cable & Wireless has an interest. Yesterday BT was adamanı that its policy of seeking partnerships, backed up by minority stakes, around the world, was the right one even though other international players such as Cable & Wireless had been getting rid of their mi-nority stakes. "We are very keen to have a spread of investments, then we can buy up and sell down. It gives us flexibility," said Andy Green, director of group strategy and mobility. Yesterday's agreement, which should close by the autumn, means that BT has doubled its existing investment in Asia to $2 billion. Under the

By Susan Emmett and ROBERT COLE

TWO-AND-A-HALF million customers of the Bradford & Bingley Building Society can look forward to windfall pay-ments of at least £800 to £1,000 as it becomes increasingly likely that the vote on the society's future will prompt the conversion of B&B into a bank. Some believe that the wind-falls could top £2,000, but the confirmed result of the vote will not be known until later today. A special members' meeting is being held this afternoon at the B&B's Yorkshire headquarters in Crossflatts. near Bingley.

If the members vote for con-version, it is likely that the B&B board will begin to press ahead with a flotation on the London Stock Exchange, However, a pro vote will also excite frenzied speculation about whether B&B will actually make it to the stock maket as an independent entity. AXA and Prudential, the insurance groups, among others, may jump in to acquire the firm. In Crossflatts, finishing touches were being made to the arrangements for the special meeting. A marquee, capable of accommodating 1,000 people, has been erected.

About 1.5 million - or 60 per cent - of the society's 2.5 million members bave already year. In the event, the provoted on the issue. Some be-lieve that 800,000 have been cast in favour of conversion.

The result may be tight, but senior B&B personnel, who have been engaged in defending the society's mututal status, have conceded that the result could go against them, and in favour of the windfall seeking carpetbaggers. Banking analysts also say there is a high likelihood that the society will convert. However, cautious observers point out that confident, but ultimately mistaken, predictions were being made about a similar vote at the Nationwide Building Society last mutuality camp won the day. The B&B vote is being viewed as a watershed decision not only for Bradford & Bingley but for the building society movement as a whole. The board is not legally required to accept members' decision. Christopher Rodrigues. chief executive, will take ac-count of the size of the poll turnout before deciding whether to act on the result of the vote. But he is unlikely to seek to thwart a clear majority vote. by savers and borrowers.

B&B, is the UK's secondlargest society. It has spent £5 million fighting the pro-conver-sion campaign led by Stephen

Major, the quantity surveyor and plumber. The B&B board, has maintained that members are better off with a mutual organisation: Such claims have been backed by high-profile figures such as Martin Bell, former war correspondent for the BBC and Independent MP for Tatton, and John Monks, General Secretary of the TUC. On the other hand, members in favour of conversion say that the one-off benefit of a windfall, plus dividends from shares owned, would more than compensate for anything lost if the firm's savings and mortgage rates became less

Littlewoods to spread its bets

By Christine Buckley

LITTLEWOODS is to split off its leisure ventures from its mail order and retail operaoons, heightening speculation that the pools and betting business could eventually be sold or floated on the stock market. The divisions will be run by separate boards under a deal 400 employees from both

BT and AT&T will transfer from the Japanese companies of the Western telephone groups to Japan Telecom and both companies will have an executive and non-executive director on the Japan Telecom

board. Although Japan Tele-com is a residential telephone operator. BT and AT&T's

will be the expansion of business with Japanese multina-tionals in Japan and in the coming third-generation mo-bile systems. BT executives said yesterday that future in-

not necessarily be with AT&T, despite the global joint venture

shake-up due to take effect on Saturday. Roger Withers, chairman of Bass Leisure South Africa, will be the nonexecuóve chairman of the leisure operacion.

Littlewoods dismissed anticipaoon of a sale or flotation of the business as speculation. The organisation is wholly owned by the Moores family. but the 30 shareholders in the family have given up day-today running of the group. Splitting Littlewoods's core operations in two is the biggest move so far by its chairman, James Ross, the former head of Cable & Wireless. Barry Gibson, the chief executive, who joined last Septemwoods Leisure and Littlewoods Retail address very separate markets and the leisure business will benefit from the dedicated focus that will come from a separate board." Littlewoods's leisure side has been under pressure from the National Lottery. The company has invested £20 million to strengthen the business and has started a telephone betting service - Bet Direct.

PowerGen stations fetch £1.4bn

BY CHRISTINE BUCKLEY

MISSION ENERGY of the US has won the race for both of the power stations Power-Gen has been forced to sell by the Government. An announcement will come today or tomorrow. The company, which owns

First Hydro, the Welsh hydroelectricity station that is vital for providing power at peak omes, has paid £1.4 billion for the two stations - Ferrybridge in West Yorkshire and Fiddlers Ferry on Merseyside. Mission, which is part of Edison international, beat off contenders including the US's NRG. The stations have been sold at a premium to the £1.1 billion they were expected to raise. All those interested in buying the stations went through a government vetting process.

A key consideration was whether the stations should go to separate buyers or as a pair. The Government was convinced that one buyer, if the right one, could provide greater competition than two.

Record merger activity

By ROBERT COLE

THE volume of mergers and acquisition activity across Europe shot to a record in the first three months of the year. According to Thomson Financial Securities Data, the financial information provider, $345 billion (£213 billion) worth of deals were struck in the quarter.

the last part of 1998, which saw $193 billion of deals. The rise was assisted by the outbreak of activity surrounding Telecom Italia and among the French banks. But the quarter also set a record for the number of deals struck. JP Morgan, the investment bank, jumped up the European adviser rankings. Helped by its efforts with Telecom Itaquarter of 1998 and beats the previous quarter record, set in

lia, JPM displaced Goldman Sachs as the adviser on most European deals, as measured by value. JPM commanded a 20 per cent market share in the first quarter, and worked on 26 deals. In the latest period Morgan

Stanley Dean Witter took second place and Warburg Dillion Read came third. Goldman, which slipped to sixth place in the rankings, leads the way globally.
